POULTRY, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

WATER.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

Plenty of water, clean, fresh and cool. All birds like it. Some poultry-keepers do not give it to very young chicks, as they say it is not necessary at first; others that give the young birds milk believe that this does instead of water. But we know from experience that, while milk is good, and the more of it the better, yet it does not take the place of water, and, as it sours very quickly just now, it cannot be left lying with the birds long. Give water from the very first, and replenish it twice or three times a day, and place it in a cool position. Clean the vessels every day, and every week give them an extra scrubbing. Don't let slime gather in the bottom of the vessel. We prefer open vessels to fountains.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT.

DUBLIN TRAIN ROBBERY.

PRISONERS GIVE EVIDENCE.

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

THE hearing was resumed yesterday of the case concerning the disappearance of £500 in silver coin from a Great Northern railway goods train in motion at Gormanstown, near Drogheda, on December 19th, 1929.

Christopher Farnan, steeplejack, Eccles street, Dublin, pleaded "guilty" to the robbery, and six men are now on trial for alleged connection with the theft.

Owen Durnin, unemployed, Tara street, Dublin, and Thomas Daly, railway porter, Amiens street, Dublin, are accused of conspiracy to steal the money. Durnin, Francis Corr, licencee of the Greyhound Inn, Swords, and his brothers, Joseph and Terence Corr, the last-named a shop assistant at North King street, Dublin, and Peter Whelan, railway signalman, Gormanstown, are charged with receiving the stolen property.

Daly, in evidence yesterday, denied all knowledge of or association with the robbery.

Peter Whelan, railway signalman at Gormanstown, gave evidence that, on the night of 18th December, 1929, his wife and children were away and he was alone in his house and in bed, when a rapping came to the door. He got up and admitted Farnan, who had a box with him, which witness thought was ammunition. Farnan brought it in, and when it was opened witness saw that it contained five bags of money.

"I asked him where he got that, and he said: 'I am after taking it off the train.' I ordered him to remove it at once, and said: 'I don't want to have anything got to do with you or it.' He said: 'Are you getting windy? You are not the man you used to be.' I said: 'I am not a bit windy You ought to know that.'

ALLEGED THREAT.

"He then took a gun out of his pocket and asked: 'Do you mean to give me away? By —— if I thought you were I would blow your brains out.'"

Continuing, he said that Farnan took one bag of silver and gave it to witness, who refused to take it. Farnan said: "You are going to keep it, whether you like it or not." They then went across the fields and hid three bags of the silver. They returned to the kitchen, and Farnan said that he was going to take witness's bicycle. Witness protested, but he took it, tied a bag of silver on to it, and went away.

He came back in a few seconds and said: "If I am arrested, I will arrange when I get back to Dublin to get you shot."

Later Farnan came to witness's house and took away the bag of silver he had left. Farnan got into trouble early in 1930, and when he was released on bail he came to witness and said he would have to get some money, as he was in trouble. Witness got £5 from his brother and gave it to him. His brother advised him to tell the police, "but I did not want to be got with a hole in me," said witness.

Francis Corr denied any association with the robbery, and said that he had never seen Farnan, Durnin or Daly until they were charged in the District Court.

Joseph and Terence Corr were examined, and, in reply to Mr. Wood, denied that they had ever received money from Farnan or the other accused men. They also denied having ever blackmailed or demanded money from Farnan.

The further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

WIFE MURDER CHARGE.

HUSBAND REMANDED.

(BEFORE MR. McCARTHY.)

Only evidence of arrest was given when John Fleming (30), draper's assistant, of 48 Carlingford road, Drumcondra, was charged with the murder of his wife, Ellen, on Wednesday evening, by striking her on the head and body with some sharp instrument. Fleming was remanded in custody.

Sergeant Byrne said that, in consequence of information received, he went with two detective-officers to a house in Clontarf road. In the back garden he saw a man, and on being told that he was being arrested for murder, and cautioned, Fleming said: "What did you say? Murder? Oh, my God! I'll go with you, sir."

"I then looked at his clothes," continued the sergeant, "and I noticed marks on the front of his shirt that appeared to me to be blood stains, and also what appeared to be blood on one of the cuffs of the shirt. I asked him to take off the shirt, and I took possession of it. I also took possession of his waistcoat, as it bore marks which appeared to me to be blood stains."

Fleming was then taken to Mountjoy Police Station, and detained. At 1.20 a.m. he was charged and cautioned by the station-sergeant, and Superintendent O'Connell wrote down his reply. The next witness was Superintendent O'Connell, who read the following statement, which he said was made by Fleming after being charged:—

"I know nothing about it, because I was not at home at the time. It was between 4 p.m. and 4.45 p.m. when I left home. At the time I left home my wife was waiting for Mr. Cunningham, insurance agent, 7 Dargle road, to call. He usually calls on Tuesday evenings."

Mr. L. Trant McCarthy appeared for Fleming.

ALLEGED FRAUDS.

Additional arrests in connection with the alleged frauds against the Department of Agriculture, under the cattle bounties scheme, for which three other men are already on remand, resulted in the appearance in the dock of Jack Woods, Woodside Lairage, Birkenhead, and William G. Woods, Kells, Co. Meath, charged with having conspired with Charles Deegan and others, already under remand, to obtain, and with having obtained, £762 from the Paymaster-General by false pretences.

Detective-Sergeant O'Neill said that both defendants, when charged and cautioned, said that they were not guilty.

The defendants were remanded until Wednesday next, bail being allowed in their own sureties of £1,000 each, and an independent surety of £1,000. Mr. Basil McGuckin, S.C., and Mr. F. E. Duffy (instructed by Mr. T. R. Callan) appeared for the defendants.

CATTLE.

DUBLIN (METROPOLITAN).

	Numbers on sale this week as compared with last.			Corresponding weeks of 1931.	1932.
Beasts ...	2,359	decrease	178	4,235	1,675
Sheep and Lambs	8,609	—decrease	1,752	12,366	8,349
Veal Calves	3	—decrease	3	3	2

A smaller supply of cattle here this week failed to tighten trade, which opened rather quiet and cautiously, but there was little difficulty in securing near previous full money for the right article, which formed a small proportion of supplies. It was evident that the smaller number of animals marketed was more than set off by a shrinkage in both home and shipping requirements, in confirmation of which it was ultimately found that the gathering proved in excess of business practicable. Choice, finished, small-weight bullocks and heifers were readily taken around previous values. After these trade was very slow and uncertain, with large numbers of useful cattle unsold at an advanced stage of market.

Practically nothing doing in shipping trade for Scotland and South of England, and but for the patronage of Lancashire and German buyers export business would have been of minor account. The home trade requirements were narrowed by the very warm weather—a complaint also heard from our German patron, who was more particular about selections of beef cows, and trade in this department was slower, with late rates difficult to repeat for the nice young heifer type, while secondary and aged beasts were unsaleable. Market generally closed with last week's lower prices difficult to repeat, notwithstanding quality of gathering being fully up to average of other years. Prime, handyweight bullocks and heifers 23s. to 24s., extra 25s. to 26s. cwt.; useful heavy sorts 21s. to 23s., plain and rough failed to clear at less than 20s.; beef cows, best 15s. to 17s., seconds 12s. to 14s., aged back to 9s., and bulls 14s. to 17s.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

Following last week's bad trade, supplies here showed the substantial decrease of 1,752 head. The lesser numbers did not correspondingly, if at all, affect the price situation. Prime qualities of mutton, specially fed classes were none too plentiful, and sold at previous tip-top rates freely. However, shippers were cautious bidders for hoggets and lambs, and this reflected a quieter tone in sheep market generally, with hoggets around 2s. per head under previous values. Coarse and inferior classes, especially ewes and small lambs, much as before hard to sell at anything near owners' ideas of value, large numbers being again turned out unsold. Mutton, prime wether, 4¾d. to 5d. lb.; heavier, 4½d.; ewes, 3d. to 3½d.; lambs, 10s. to 17s., with a few special lots up to 22s. per head.

DAIRY CATTLE.

There was a keener inquiry for suitable dairy stock here this week. However, biddings were cautious for the bulk of supplies, which was mostly of ordinary type, but with a smaller supply of cows—viz., 268 head—to draw upon, previous money values were repeated, with an occasional £1 or so per head for outstanding cows. Choice heifers in milk got fairly well placed, without any material change in values, but smalls and doubtful animals proved just as hard to place as previously, and even at the low rates ruling market failed to sell up. Best cows £14 to £17, extra £18 to £19 per head; heifers £13 to £16, seconds £10 to £12, and smalls, etc., £7 to £9.

PIGS.

Market comprised 823 head of swine, just 39 less than last week's gathering. Most of our regular buyers were in attendance, and although a cautious disposition governed business, previous currencies were generally repeated, with an occasional advance on prime bacon pigs for local demands. Lightweight porkers were again cautiously bid for, but cleared fairly well, as did sows, which were in small supply. Fewer buyers for slips and bonhams, and trade for these was disappointing throughout, many lots being turned out unsold. Prime light-weight porkers 46s. to 48s. per cwt. dead, medium bacon 60s. to 64s., heavier 52s. to 56s., sows 32s. to 34s., slips 24s. to 35s. each, and bonhams 14s. to 20s.

BRISTOL.—About 100 fresh Irish cattle and 50 English at the market. Owing to the extremely hot weather business was very restricted. Best beef made 6½d. per lb. Very few buyers for some choice yearlings, prices for which were from £10 to £12 apiece. Quiet demand for the short supply of milch cattle, prices ranging from £14 to £18 each.

YORK.—Very few pens of Irish store cattle, with trade nearly at standstill, and very few sales. Best heifers to £15. Average show dairy cattle, but small demand. Cows £22, calving heifers to £18 each. Some nice Scotch lambs, but no quotations and no sales.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—Fair supply, and trade slow to medium. The heat wave has affected business somewhat, and values are on the easy side. Quotations: Bacons 10/- to 10/6, cutters also 10/- to 10/6, and sows 8/- per score deadweight.

GRAIN.

FLOATING GRAIN CARGOES (BALTIC).—WHEAT—A firm tone continues for cargoes, following the rise on North American markets, and prices were advanced by 3d. to 9d. per quarter, the latter for Canadian grades Buyers, however, adopt a reserved attitude; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, Churchill, 10th/25th August, sellers 31/-; No. 2 ditto, 30/3; Australian, afloat, 28/6; August, also September, 28/9. Parcels firm and 9d. to 10½d. dearer for Manitobas; other sorts unchanged; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, Vancouver, August, sellers 31/3; Atlantic, 31/1½; No. 2, Vancouver, 30/4½; Atlantic, 30/6; No 3, Vancouver, 29/3; Australian, afloat, 28/-; German, on sample, August, 24/-; September, 23/6 per 480lb. It is interesting to note that tonnage inquiries are increasing for grain space from the Danube and Russian Black Sea ports. MAIZE—Cargoes steady, but inactive. Plate, afloat, sellers 17/-; July, 17/6; August, 17/9; September, 18/-; October, 18/3. Parcels quiet of sale on about former terms. Plate, afloat, sellers 16/10½; July-August, 16/9; August-September, 17/-; September-October, 17/4½; October-November, 17/9, per 480lb. BARLEY firm for Canadian, but European descriptions easier. Parcels of No. 3 Canadian Western, Northern Vancouver, August, sellers 21/10½; Atlantic, 22/-; Plate, 64/65 kilos, August, 15/9; Persian, new, August-September, also September-October, 15/3; Danubian, August, also September-October, 15/-; Russian, September, also October, 15/-, per 400lb. OATS—Canadian firmer, but inactive. Plate offered at 3d. per quarter decline. Parcels of No. 2 Canadian Western, Vancouver, July-August, sellers 18/-; No. 3 ditto, 17/6; Plate, afloat, 12/-; August, 12/3; September, 12/4½ per 320lb.

LIVERPOOL.—The sharp rise in Winnipeg and recovery in the Argentine caused forward deliveries of wheat here to show a fair advance at the outset, and, although a slight reaction took place, prices again moved upwards, with slight fluctuations, finishing at the best point, and marking a considerable gain on the day, afternoon cables having a favourable influence. C.i.f. parcels wheat unchanged to 9d. dearer; No. 2 Manitoba August quoted 30/-, Rosario-Santa Fe (63½lb.) July 25/-, and Australian July sold at 28/1½ per quarter. C.i.f. parcels River Plate Maize easier; August-September sold at 16/9, but 16/10½ now bidding. WHEAT on the spot firm and dearer. MAIZE—Spot parcels steady at 3/10½ per cental for River Plate. FLOUR steady at late rates. Graded wheat futures opened ⅛d. to ⅜d. per cental dearer, receded ⅛d., but again improved, fluctuated slightly in the end, being firm at best point, or 1⅛d. to 1⅜d. advance on the day, December delivery being most affected. Values—July 5/7¼, October 5/9⅜, December 5/11⅛, March 6/0⅞ per cental. Sales, 150 loads.

PROVISIONS

LIVERPOOL.—BACON—Danish supplies practically exhausted, but for anything available considerably over the official prices would be readily paid, while other descriptions are in only moderate request round about official prices. Irish, American and Canadian steady at late rates. London made no change in their official quotations to-day. HAMS quiet, with the supply fully equal to requirements. Shoulders scarce and steadily held. LARD on the spot advanced 1/-, prime steam now 41/- to 42/-, American refined 42/- to 43/6 per cwt., but buyers still operate cautiously. CHEESE firm and in moderate request at late rates. BUTTER also firm and generally 1/- to 2/- dearer, Danish now held at 78/- to 102/-, Irish 81/- to 85/-, New Zealand finest and Australian 84/- to 88/-, New Zealand first grade 83/- to 87/- per cwt. EGGS quiet and partially easier. Irish Free State extra selected 9/6 to 9/9, selected 9/3 to 9/6, mediums 8/3 to 8/6, duck 7/- to 7/3, Northern Ireland specials 11/- to 11/3, standards 10/- to 10/3, selected 9/- to 9/3, duck 7/- to 7/3 per 120.

BRISTOL.—BACON—The demand for Danish was well sustained, while other Continental brands were in better request, and with lighter supplies official prices disclose no change. HAMS were quiet, and about 2/- per cwt. cheaper for short cuts. LARD has fluctuated rather violently during the past week, but on balance prices are about 2/6 down. CHEESE had a quiet trade, with Canadian about steady and New Zealand about 2/- higher on balance. BUTTER was more active early in the week, and Colonial descriptions were marked higher, but the demand has been rather quieter at the advance.

CARDIFF.—There has been a welcome improvement in the demand in most sections, and with supplies offering rather less freely firmer values have been established. Wholesale quotations, delivered in Cardiff district:—BACON—Irish baled 5/- to 4/- higher at 88/- to 90/-, Danish 2/- dearer at 75/- to 83/- per cwt. HAMS—American partially 2/- lower at 76/- to 88/- per cwt. BUTTER—Irish creameries 4/- firmer at 80/- to 84/-, Danish 2/- dearer at 99/- to 103/-, New Zealand 4/- higher at 83/- to 87/- per cwt. EGGS—Irish hen (best) 6d. higher at 9/6 to 10/- per 120. POULTRY—Chickens 9d. to 1/-, hens 6d. to 8d. per lb.

SALE OF INVESTMENTS.

Yesterday Messrs. Dockrell held a successful sale of profit rents at their property salerooms, South Great George's street, Dublin. The rents are derived out of property in Monkstown, Dun Laoghaire and Sandycove. There was a large attendance, and bidding was very keen. Each lot was knocked down at well over the reserve figure. The sale realised £2,270. 46 Kimmage road also was offered for sale and withdrawn, as it did not reach the reserve figure.

NATIONAL BANK MEETING.

SIR THOMAS GRATTAN ESMONDE'S RESIGNATION.

MR. COOKE ON BANKING PRACTICE AND THEORY.

DEPOSIT RATES AND ADVANCES.

The half-yearly general meeting of the National Bank, Ltd., was held at 34 College Green, Dublin, yesterday. Mr. Michael J. Cooke, Chairman, presided, and the other directors present were:—Mr. James John O'Connell, the Right Hon. Sir Thomas Francis Molony, Bart., P.C.; Mr. Stephen Joseph Toole, Mr. John Philip Butler, Mr. James Dwyer, Captain the Hon. Sutherland, P. P. Shee, P. C. Vereker.

The Secretary (Mr. H. A. Russell) read the notice convening the meeting.

MR. COOKE'S ADDRESS.

The Chairman, in moving that the report of the directors and the statement of accounts be received and adopted, said:—

Ladies and gentlemen—Before proceeding with the ordinary business, it is fitting that I should allude to the losses which the board—and the bank—have sustained by the death of the Chairman, Mr. Meers, and the resignation, through impaired health, of the Deputy Chairman, Sir Thomas Grattan Esmonde. Mr. Meers was a director of the bank for 21 years, during ten of which he acted, with distinction, as chairman. In the discharge of his duties he gave of his best, and we will sadly miss him. He had a great love for Ireland and Irishmen in general. Sir Thomas Grattan Esmonde is, as you know, the representative of a family famous in the annals of Irish history. His name is a household one in our country, and he has been honoured in many lands. He has been a director for over 36 years, and his family has been associated with the bank since its foundation by the Liberator. He has always taken a great interest and pride in the traditions of our institution, and I am certain, ladies and gentlemen, that you will join with us in wishing him a speedy recovery.

THE BALANCE SHEET.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, we will proceed to the business of the meeting. The directors' report, the balance sheet and the profit and loss account having been duly circulated, we will, with your permission, follow the usual course of taking them as read.

If you will kindly refer to the balance sheet in your hands, I will now analyse the principal items and compare the figures with those placed before you twelve months ago.

The paid-up capital remains at £1,500,000, while our reserve fund is £1,040,000, to which we propose to add £10,000 out of the past half-year's profits. Notes in circulation are up by £29,000 and our deposits show an expansion of £715,000. Acceptances are higher by about £13,000.

If we now take the "assets" side, it will be seen that "cash in hand" is up by £897,000 and our "money at call" is lower by £1,598,000; but, on the other hand, the next item—viz., Government securities—is increased by £2,111,000. Corporation, railway and other stocks also are higher by £550,000.

"Advances on securities" show a decline of £1,364,000, while bills discounted have increased by £164,000.

The next item is merely a contra entry, while "bank premises" show a small increase of £2,700.

Summarising the totals, it will be found that our aggregate means stand at some £43,000,000, and our liquid assets show a proportion of 63.9 per cent. as against our liabilities to the public payable on demand.

The profit and loss account speaks for iself. We propose to pay a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, less income tax, and we add £10,000 to the reserve fund and place a like amount to contingencies account, carrying forward £31,337 to new account. All bad and doubtful debts have been fully provided for.

A DIFFICULT HALF-YEAR.

The half-year under review has been one of difficulty and anxiety for bankers. Our "seconud line of defence"—"call" money—had to be employed at most unremunerative rates, and it is, therefore, satisfactory that we have been able to maintain our dividend.

I am also pleased to be able to say that the number of accounts open shows a further substantial increase, which is a highly satisfactory indication of the ever increasing clientele of the bank.

I would here remind you that it has ever been one of the foremost traditions of our bank to ensure that the requirements of those in a small way of business are catered for. As the pioneer of the thrift deposit system, we have since 1905 provided facilities for the accumulating of savings from one shilling upwards, and the needs of the smallest borrowers have, since our foundation, never been overlooked. We have no reason to regret our policy of assisting to the utmost of our ability all classes of the community, and much of the strength of our institution is due to the honouring of this tradition.

PRACTICE AND THEORY.

With regard to the position generally, economics have, in many countries, become merged in politics, and, as by tradition, bankers do not enter into matters political, it will be understood that nothing of a controversial nature can be said. Our views on monetary problems are, I need not say, always willingly given, when we are asked for them, to the elected representatives of the people. In this matter of monetary problems, ladies and gentlemen, it ought to be said that a large number of the accepted treatises on economics are written by theorists, or by those who have only a one-sided knowledge of the many phases of the subject with which they deal. Theory, however, rarely harmonises with practice, and there a danger lies. A well-known man said a short time ago: "In recent years practice has humiliated theory."

We are, ladies and gentlemen, living in strange times—over-production, quotas, unemployment, depreciation of currencies, bank failures in many countries—to name only a few of the difficulties surrounding us.

I believe it is impossible to overlook economic principles and scientific developments, which, in the opinion of the vast majority, must be ascribed to providence. A true conception of these clearly indicates to many minds the laws which should govern—at least, our main actions—if we are to prevent and avoid further chaos.

SOLIDITY OF IRISH BANKS.

In one direction, I am certain you will agree, we have cause for satisfaction, and that is the manner in which the Irish banking system has withstood the world crisis, and what it has done, and is doing, to help the country.

Mutual confidence is the foundation of this system, and, by reason of the limited securities of a satisfactory class available, this is necessarily so. Bearing in mind what has happened in other countries, it would be a calamity if anything should happen to shake or interfere with this confidence. It is generally admitted we are overtaxed, and we have to work on a very small margin of profit, when salaries and expenses are taken into account. Moreover, we pay interest on a very large percentage of our resources, and this percentage is greater in this country than in any other country similarly situated.

Again, it must not be forgotten that the old banks of issue some years ago surrendered their old rights of note issue in order that the profits of the State would be augmented. This was patriotic, but meant a serious loss of income. The results form portion of the amount transferred to the credit of the State by the Currency Commission from time to time. I do not think that the public realise that the banks are now paying a tax of 3 per cent. per annum for their consolidated notes, or what may be described—to make it more clear—as the notes they have to keep in their tills for the purpose of supplying to customers when they cash their cheques. This tax was first agreed at 1½ per cent. per annum, but has since been increased to the figure stated. I think it is only right to point out that, owing to the loss of our old note issues and the increased tax alluded to, some of our smaller branches are not now paying, and they would not have been opened originally had we not had, at that time, the many advantages of an unlimited note issue.

DEPOSIT RATES.

There appears to be a misconception as regards the rates charged and allowed by the Irish banks. A comparison with those ruling in England, the United States, France, Germany and Italy, to name the important countries, proves, when allowance is made for the different systems in each of these countries, that the depositor and the borrower in Ireland have, on balance, the more favourable terms.

One or two simple examples of this will suffice:—The present rate in Ireland for deposits is 1 per cent. per annum on sums under £2,000 and 1½ per cent. per annum on sums over that amount. In London, the clearing banks' rate is ½ per cent. per annum and ¾ per cent. per annum if the deposit is fixed for a period. In New York last month—in order, presumably, to help the banks over the crisis there—a decree was promulgated discontinuing interest on what is known as demand deposits or credit balances. The rate there, at present, for other deposits, which must be fixed for two months, is 1 per cent. per annum.

As regards advances, the majority of countries do not allow overdrafts—they make advances on a loan account—and the working account in connection therewith must be worked with a creditor balance. This, of course, adds considerably to the cost to the borrower. Loan accounts are practically unknown in Ireland. Commercial advances in Italy at present are 6 per cent. to 7 per cent., and in France, when allowance is made for commission, 5½ per cent. to 6½ per cent., according to the status of the debtor. In England, also, advances command higher rates than those ruling here. In conclusion I can add that the Irish banks perform without charge services for their customers which are charged for elsewhere.

THE STAFF.

From time to time my predecessor in this chair has mentioned the achievements of our staff at the Institute of Bankers' examinations, and reference has been made to the generous prizes which your directors grant to those officials who succeed in obtaining the certificates awarded by the Institute. This has always been a matter of great gratification to me personally, as it has been my constant endeavour for many years past to encourage the staff to acquire a sound knowledge of the technicalities of their profession. I am sure you will be pleased to hear that practically all of our officials belong to the Institute of Bankers, and thus keep in touch with current banking topics, whilst considerably more than two hundred of our staff now hold the various final certificates which are issued by the Institute to those successful at the examinations. You will readily perceive that the encouragement which has been given to the staff in this matter is not only in the interests of the officials themselves, but is also of much practical value to the bank in the daily conduct of business. The directors join with me in thanking the staff for their services and loyalty during the difficult times we are passing through, and we express the hope that they will continue to lose no opportunity of furthering the interests of the bank.

It now only remains for me to move that the report of the directors and statement of accounts be received and adopted.

Before I put the resolution formally I shall be glad to hear any shareholder, and to give any further information in my power. (Applause.)

Mr. James John O'Connell seconded the resolution.

Mr. J. J. Maguire said that in co-opting Mr. O'Toole the directors had put the right man in the right place. He agreed with the chairman's statement, which was a splendid exposition of the situation. In this country, in addition to other taxation, they had the corporation profits tax and increased income tax. The writing down of the value of Railway stock was a great loss to the banks, because they were large shareholders. An effort should be made to try and have removed the tremendous amount of over-taxation which they were called upon to bear.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

Mr. P. Burrowes Shiel expressed pleasure at the election of Mr. Cooke as chairman, and wished him a long and successful term of office.

The Chairman proposed the confirmation of the election of Mr. Stephen Joseph Toole as a director of the bank. He said that Mr. Toole was well known to all of them. He had great banking experience, and would prove a very valuable director.

Mr. J. J. O'Connell seconded the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

Answering Mr. James Reynolds, a shareholder, the Chairman said:—"The salary I had as general manager of the bank is incorporated in that of the Chairman. I am still a member of the staff. I retain my pension rights. I no longer draw salary or fees as a member of the staff."

THANKS TO THE CHAIRMAN.

The Right Rev. Monsignor Cummins (Roscommon) said that he had been asked on behalf of the shareholders to propose a vote of thanks to the Chairman, directors and staff for the manner in which they had conducted the business of the bank. He complied with that request with the greatest possible pleasure. The statement read by the Chairman was, on the whole, very satisfactory, considering the difficulties that confronted the directors—difficulties which they had to share in common with persons similarly situated throughout the world. They had steered the ship of that institution through shoals and between rocks, and had done remarkably well. The shareholders could have trust and confidence in the bank.

On behalf of the shareholders, he congratulated the Chairman on the position which he occupied that day. They were proud that a life of labour, a life of intelligent interest, a life of devotion to the bank's interest, had been rewarded by his appointment to the highest position which the bank could offer to him. (Applause.)

The death of Mr. Meers was a great loss to the bank. He had always used his wise judgment and great experience to advance the interest of the bank. They all regretted that Sir Thomas Esmonde had had to retire, for health reasons, from his position as director. He held with great credit the position of vice-chairman of the bank and chairman of the Dublin Board. Sir Thomas Esmonde had been prominent in the public life of the country for half a century: he was a scion of a great stock—a courteous, genial Irish gentleman, who was regarded with esteem not only in this country, but the world over. He was as well known in Rome and Washington as he was in Westminster, and they all hoped that he would be spared for a great many years to come. (Applause.)

Mr. Glennon seconded the resolution and endorsed the remarks of Monsignor Cummins.

The Chairman, on behalf of himself, the directors and staff, thanked the proposer and seconder for the vote of thanks, and the shareholders for the manner in which they had received it. He appreciated their references to the late Mr. Meers and to Sir Thomas Esmonde. It was a great pleasure to the directors to know that they had the confidence of the shareholders. He felt deeply grateful for their personal references to himself. He was well aware of his limitations, but they could rest assured that he would give his very best services to that great national institution. (Applause.)

Free State Funds were firm, the Third Loan being ½ better at 111. War Loan was easier. Bank Stock rose 1½ to 295.

In Rails, Great Southern Guar. was in demand at an enhanced price. Dublin Tram Pref. rose ⅛ to 9⅝.

The Whiskey group dwindled down to a couple of markings in Distillers (Scotch), which closed threepence better at 78s. 9d. Guinness units further improved to 97s. Alliance Gas remained at 12 11/16. Denny Pref. rose ¼ to 9, and Helys Ord. shot up 1s. 9d. further to 36s.

The Industrial market was almost devoid of feature. The Chemicals issues, which are being strongly recommended in a Dublin broker's letter, were a few pence easier, and Dunlops and Imperial Tobacco moved to lower levels. B.A.T. and Coats were firm spots.

LONDON FIRMER.

BRITISH RAILS STRONG.

The London Stock markets again displayed a quiet appearance for the greater part of yesterday's session, buyers being noticeable by their absence. Nevertheless a somewhat firmer undertone was in evidence, and while dull spots were not lacking, the majority of movements returned at the close were in the right direction. British Rails were an outstanding feature of strength. At the commencement the dull and quiet conditions which developed on Wednesday following the rather disappointing traffic figures continued, and values, if anything, were put back a shade further; but later the market rallied sharply, being stimulated by the unexpectedly favourable nature of the interim statements of the Midland and Southern Companies. The London, Midland and Scottish announce interim dividends of 1 p.c. on the 4 p.c. Preference and of 1¼ p.c. on the 5 p.c. Redeemable Preference, these being at the same rate of a year ago. The Southern Railway is paying the full interim dividends on all its Preference stocks.

British Funds continued in a neglected condition, but values moved narrowly. Business among Foreign Government stocks remained on modest lines and values mostly went against holders. Brazilians were depressed, the 6½ p.c. 1927 losing 1¾ points and the 5 p.c. Funding 1914 1½ points, while Chinese descriptions also weakened. German Bonds, on the other hand, were rather firmer, the Sevens closing ½ up at 82. British Rails, as mentioned above, provided the feature, and quotations shot forward sharply, all the leaders and most of the junior stocks returning substantial gains, with Southern Preferred Ordinary in the lead and closing 1¾ points to the good. There was again very little passing among Colonial and Foreign Rails, and, with the exception of the Buenos Ayres issues, which weakened further, quotations were much the same as previously.

Conditions in the Industrial section were quiet and price changes were of only modest proportions. On balance, however, they favoured holders, London Brick and Cables and Wireless being firm spots. Elsewhere Rubber shares weakened further in sympathy with the commodity. Oils moved irregularly, but Mines as a whole were firmer, Kaffirs being in demand and better on the good advices from Johannesburg.

HARLAND AND WOLFF'S MEETING.

SIGNS OF STEADY IMPROVEMENT

The annual general meeting of Harland and Wolff, Ltd., was held yesterday in London.

Mr. F. E. Rebbeck, J.P. (chairman and managing director), in moving the adoption of the annual report and statement of accounts, said it was only ten months since the last annual meeting, and at that time he dealt fully with the shipbuilding position, indicating that it was unlikely that orders would be placed in the immediate future of sufficient volume materially to improve the outlook for shipbuilders, and this unfortunately proved to be the case. The orders placed by the Admiralty, as far as they go, are proving helpful to the industry. There is still no general movement on the part of shipowners in this country to replace vessels which it is common knowledge are in many cases falling behind in competitive power as compared with vessels of other nations. Action must in the first instance come from the shipowners, who are called upon to face world conditions of trade and competition, and some means must be found to counteract the effects of subsidies paid by foreign governments to support their mercantile marines.

Whilst there is no apparent prospect of a substantial improvement in trade at present, there are indications of a steady betterment of things in general. The fact that the improvement is gradual is the most healthy sign of eventual recovery. The shipbuilding industry, however, is one of the last to benefit from such an upward movement in trade, and the greater degree of confidence that is becoming evident must develop further before we can expect a return to more prosperous times in the industry.

Nevertheless during recent months there has been a slightly better demand for merchant vessels, but, with so few orders to be distributed, and the fierce competition which therefore exists, builders have to be satisfied with very poor prices.

Even under the extremely competitive conditions of to-day, it is gratifying to note that the company is obtaining a share of the relatively small amount of work that is being placed. The work in hand includes the two fine motor ships for the Shaw, Savill and Albion Company, Limited, the keels of which were laid last month, and two steamers for the Indian Coastal Service.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

LONDON BRICK STRONG.

Despite a slackening in demand trading in the Industrial Market was on a fair scale yesterday, and the tone generally firm. Fresh buyers were in evidence towards the close for some of the home issues

With Wall street in rather uncertain mood the trans-Atlantic counters made an irregular showing. Steels were a bright spot in the late dealings at 61½.

Cables and Wireless stocks presented a firmer front, but there was not a great deal doing. Canadian Marconi recovered to 13s. 3d.

Firmness continued to be displayed by both Electric Supply and Equipment shares, although business generally was on a small scale.

There was again very little doing in Iron, Coal and Steel shares.

Motor shares continued to receive a fair amount of attention, prices movements again being in the upward direction.

Distillers opened around 79s., slipped back to 78s. 3d., but strengthened later to 79s. 6d. Vancouvers gained a few pence, and Booths Distilleries were fairly well maintained, the new Debenture stock closing at 3 prem. Guinness improved 6d. to 97s.

A renewed inquiry was noticeable towards the close for the leading Tobacco shares. "Imps" made the best showing with an advance of 1s. 3d. to 105s. 3d. "Bats" improved to 108s., and Carreras "A" gained the turn at 7 11/16.

Rayons made a satisfactory showing, though American Celanese after being up to 8 11/16 reacted in the late dealings to 8⅝. Canadian Celanese finished at 4⅛, and moderate gains were recorded by British Celanese at 17s. 6d. and Courtaulds at 39s. 4½d.

Textiles seemed rather uncertain. J. and P. Coats, Fine Spinners and Linen Thread presented a firm appearance, but Patons and Baldwins came on offer and declined 7½d. to 57s. 4½d.

Tate and Lyle found quiet support. Unilever were a trifle harder, but the N.V. shares seemed undecided.

In the Miscellaneous section most of the interest again centred around London Brick, which changed hands up to 70s. 4½d. and finished 1s. higher on the day at 70s. 3d.

Dunlops came in for renewed support and closed 6d. up at 35s. 6d., while Harrisons and Crosfield had buyers at 74s. 3d. Chemicals were a trifle harder at 30s. 3d.

Boots Drug strengthened to 7 5/16.

OIL SHARES IDLE.

Dealers in Oil shares found little business yesterday, the market all round being in an extremely quiet condition throughout the day. Not only was local interest negligible, but there was little doing on Paris account, for, although French operators were inclined to buy international counters about midday, the actual business transacted on behalf of the Continent was of little importance and hardly affected prices. At the close slightly lower prices were general, but the declines were attributable rather to lack of demand than to selling pressure in any direction.

RUBBER SHARES DULL.

Trading remained on restricted lines in the Rubber Share market. Share values reflected the downward trend of quotations in the raw material market, and although share price movements were not numerous they were usually adverse to holders. In the raw material market values weakened rather sharply. Spot and August went from 4 7/16d. to 4 5/16d. per lb., with Oct. to Dec. closing at 4½d. per lb. and January to March at 4⅝d. per lb.

ESCAPE THROUGH WINDOW FROM FIRE.

An escape from a fire in his house was made yesterday morning through a window, by means of bedclothes, by Mr. William Connolly, victualler, Granard.

The fire, which was extinguished by the Civic Guards, is believed to have been started by a lighting candle, which was left on a cupboard in Mr. Connolly's bedroom.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET.

The International section in Shorter's court again claimed the bulk of attention in the after-hours dealings last evening. As on the previous evening, business continued until after 7 o'clock.

Nickels, after being offered down to 20 7/16, closed only ¼ lower at 20 7/16. Tractions moved up in the early dealings, but developed weakness later, being finally called 1/16 down at 15⅛.

Distillers strengthened a few pence to 79s. 6d., but Molasses were 3d. easier at 14s. 3d. Other Industrials displayed a firm tone, but business was on a small scale.

LONDON MINING MARKET BRIGHTER.

IMPROVED DEMAND FOR KAFFIRS.

The feature of the Mining market yesterday was an improvement in the demand for Kaffirs. Johannesburg was a more active buyer, and particular attention was paid to the shares of several of the non-producers.

In other directions business was still far from brisk, although buyers were paying attention to individual issues such as Gold Fields Developments, Rhodesian Corporations and Ashantis.

That less interest was taken in Westralians was attributed by dealers to the intervention of the settlement. Some of the leaders, however, continued to make headway.

Changes in the base metal prices were too small to have much effect on share prices. The only notable movement was an advance of £1 5s. in tin, but Tin shares were quietly irregular.

There was little going on in Rhodesian Copper shares. A modest inquiry was reported for the Indians, but most of the West Africans remained in the doldrums. Closing prices:—

Thomas Brien, Mountpoplar, was, at Trim District Court, awarded £7 damages against Joseph Lynch, Clonmore, in an action for damages for assault.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

BRITISH RAILWAYS.

LONDON, MIDLAND AND SCOTTISH.

Interim dividends for the past half-year of 1 per cent. on the First Pref. and 1¼ per cent. on the 5 per Cent. Redeemable Pref., the same as those paid for the first half of 1932. Receipts from all sources decreased by £1,700,000, but savings in working expenses were effected to the amount of £1,400,000, leaving a net reduction of only £300,000. Last year the final dividend of 2 per cent. was paid on the First Pref. and 2½ per cent. on the 5 per Cent. Redeemable Preference, making the full return for the year 3 per cent. and 3¾ per cent. respectively.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY.

The directors have decided not to declare any interim dividend on the Preferred Ordinary stock for the past half-year. Dividends at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum on the Guaranteed Preferred and Preference stocks will be paid, less tax, on August 11. For the first half of 1932 the same distributions were made. The receipts from passenger traffic have increased by £50,000, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, while the goods traffic shows a decrease of £150,000. Railway expenditure has been reduced by £250,000. The net receipts from steamboats, docks, harbours, wharves, hotels, interest, etc., show an increase of £130,000. The net revenue for the half-year is about £280,000 more than last year. The Redeemable Debenture stock, issued in October, 1932, amounting to £4,750,000, ranks for interest, as from January 1 last, requiring £190,000 for the full year. Railway traffic receipts still show a tendency to decline. In the December half-year of 1932 considerable economies in expenditure were effected, but it will not be possible to effect further economies on the same scale in the second half of this year.

GRAND CANAL DIVIDEND REDUCED.

The directors of the Grand Canal Company have declared an interim dividend for the half-year ending the 30th June, 1933, at the rate of three per cent. per annum, less income tax, on the Preference shares, and at the rate of one per cent. per annum, less income tax, on the Ordinary shares of the company. (Last year the interim on the Ordinary was at the rate of 2 per cent. per annum.)

Banco de Chile.—The report for the half-year ended June 30 last states that the net profit amounted to $7,248,325, in comparison with $6,107,329 for the corresponding half of 1932. Adding the amount standing to the credit of the shareholders' fund of $7,738,811 there was an available total of $14,987,136. The directors recommend a dividend of $7 per share, against $6 per share a year ago, leaving $7,987,136 to go forward.

Bowlana Tea Estates. — The accounts for the year ended March 31 last show that trading resulted in a deficit of £2,051, to which is added Debenture interest and trustees' fees, £1,601. A credit balance of £240 was brought forward and the sum of £2,750 has been taken from reserve, leaving a debit balance of £662 to be carried forward. For the previous year the profit on working was £911.

Commercial Bank of Australia.—Net profit for the twelve months ending 30th June, 1933, were £213,633, as against £199,670 for the previous year. Final dividend for six months on Pref. shares at 4 per cent. per annum, and a final dividend for six months on Ordinary shares of 5 per cent. per annum. Forward £79,251. The dividends in both cases are payable in Australian currency.

City of London Electric Lighting Co.—The following dividends declared on account of the distribution for the year 1933:—On the company's 6 per cent. First Pref. shares 7.2d. per share, being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ended June 30th, 1933; on the company's 8 per cent. Second Pref. shares 9.6d. per share, being at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ended June 30th, 1933, and on the company's Ordinary shares 8.4d. per share, being at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ended June 30th, 1933. In 1932 dividends amounting to 10 per cent. per Ordinary share were paid.

Geo. Basse and Co.—Dividend on Ordinary of 11½ per cent., making 17½ per cent. (20 per cent.). Forward £11,256.

George Peak and Co.—No dividend on 8 per cent. Pref. shares.

Holborn and Frascati.—Interim dividends of 2 per cent. on the Ordinary and 2½ per cent. on the Pref. shares, both less tax (same).

Johnson Cole Brier and Cordrey.—Dividend of 4 per cent. for year.

North Kalgurli.—The directors of North Kalgurli (1912), in their report for 1932, state that as a result of an arrangement with Boulder Perseverance for an extension of treatment plant, the amount to be provided by the company is £45,000. While this could be provided out of cash resources and revenue, the directors propose, in order that revenue should be available forthwith for dividends, to increase the capital from £75,000 to £100,000 by the creation of 250,000 shares of 2s. each. These will be offered to shareholders at 5s. per share in the proportion of one new share for every three held. An interim dividend of 25 per cent., less tax, will be paid on account of the current year's profits. This is the first dividend to be distributed.

South Metropolitan Gas Company.—Interim dividend of 2½ per cent. actual on Ord. for the six months ended 30th June, 1933 (same).

Third Guardian Trust.—Dividend at rate of 5 per cent. per annum, less tax, on Cumulative Pref. stock, and interim of 1 per cent. actual, less tax, on Ordinary, for half-year ended September 15, 1933 (same).

United Grain Elevators.—Interim of 2½ per cent. on Ordinary, against 3¾ per cent., free of tax.

Western Wagon and Property.—Interim dividend on account of year 1933 at rate of 10 per cent. per annum (same).

ASSURANCE COMPANIES IN FREE STATE.

From a report for the year 1930, which has just been issued by the Free State Ministry of Industry and Commerce, it appears that during that year there were ten companies established within the Free State carrying on certain classes of assurance business, while there were sixty-nine companies established outside of the Free State carrying on various classes of insurance. The report gives particulars of the deposits held by the accountant of the Courts of Justice in respect of certain of these companies. The report also shows the different classes of business in respect of which the various companies had complied with the requirements of the Assurance Companies Act, as well as statements submitted by certain of these companies as prescribed by the Act.

THE MONEY MARKET

SHARP RISE IN GOLD.

Speculative buying resulted in a sharp recovery in the price of silver yesterday. Spot was fixed 1/16d. higher at 18 1/16d., and forward ⅛d. higher at 18⅛d. per ounce. The market closed steady.

Continental hoarders took £160,000 of gold offering in the bullion market. The price was fixed 8½d. higher at 124s. 6d. per fine ounce, a premium of 10½d. being included in this quotation.

In Lombard street money was in quiet demand at rates varying between ¼ and ½ p.c.

Business in bills was quiet, and the tone steady. Dealings took place in "hot" Treasuries at 11/32 p.c., and in three months' Bank bills at ⅜ p.c.

Movements of the chief exchanges yesterday were wider than for some days past, and the market was extremely sensitive. Both the dollar and the gold currencies improved during the day, but the latter reacted sharply just before the close.

On a considerable investment demand dollars, after opening at 4.64, improved during the morning to 4.58, and, with the opening of New York, strengthened further and touched 4.52½. The final rate of 4.53½ was 8c. lower than Wednesday's close.

The principal gold exchanges weakened during the day. Just before the close, however, there was quite a sharp reaction, and final rates were well above the lowest recorded. Francs were finally 1/16fr. firmer at 85 1/16.

Other gold exchanges followed the movements of the franc rate. The Swiss rate fell by 8½c. to 17.18, the Belgian rate by 8c. to 23.85, and the Dutch exchange by 2½c. to 8.25. Reichsmarks were 4½pf. firmer at the close at 13.95.

Far Eastern currencies were a little better, the Hong Kong dollar being 17d., as against 16⅞d., and the Shanghai dollar 15 5/16d. compared with 15⅛d. on Wednesday.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

ARGENTINE DEBT.

A Buenos Aires telegram states that such a variety of counsels seem to be prevailing in regard to the future financial policy of the Argentine that public confidence has been shaken and alarmist rumours are finding reflection in the Press. It is said that the majority of the Cabinet favour inflation or a moratorium, or both, while the Right Wing, headed by Dr. Sanchez Sorondo, unanimously believes that a moratorium is essential for the nation's well-being. It is believed that the Government of Argentina will meet its obligations as long as possible, but since the resignation of Dr. Hueyo, the Minister of Finance, the strength of those favouring remission or a moratorium has grown. Although there was still a complete absence of definite news regarding the position which has arisen in connection with the Argentine Government debt, the course of events in the Foreign market in the London Stock Exchange afforded fresh evidence of the alarm felt by holders of the bonds as the result of recent talk of a possible default. Inquiries in usually well-informed quarters failed to elicit any confirmation of the reports in circulation, and, although the suspension in sinking funds was regarded as not altogether impossible, the idea that there will be any default in interest payments was generally scouted. There was a suggestion that payments might be made for a time partly in cash and partly in scrip. In sympathy with the decline in the Government loans, a reaction occurred in the Railway stocks, although dealers held to the view that the exchange agreement will be maintained.

NEW DEBENTURE OFFER.

An offer will shortly be made to the shareholders of the 7 per cent. First Mortgage Debenture stock in Peter Walker (Warrington) and Robert Cain and Sons, Ltd., to convert into a new Debenture at 4½ per cent. The 7 per cent. First Mortgage Debenture stock was issued in October, 1921, at 92½ per cent., and is redeemable at par by the operation of a cumulative sinking fund, the final date of redemption being December, 1964. There is no power of previous redemption, but, in the event of liquidation, the stock is repayable at par. The terms of the offer will be announced later.

RUBBER GROWERS' SECRET MEETING.

The Dutch Rubber Growers' Association met to-day in a secret meeting, says a message from The Hague, dated Thursday. No official statement was issued, but a conference is to be held at the Colonial Office later. After a short meeting at the International Rubber Association's Amsterdam office some members left for The Hague to meet other members for further discussion of the plan. Reuter learns that it is uncertain whether a statement will be issued. Apparently fresh discussions are necessary; therefore, the meeting at Amsterdam was abandoned.

BANK RATE UNCHANGED.

The directors of the Bank of England, at their meeting yesterday, decided to make no change in the Bank rate, which remains at 2 per cent.

DERRY ACCIDENT.

DUBLIN MAN'S WIFE INJURED.

Three persons are in Derry Infirmary as a result of a serious motor accident in Derry early yesterday morning. They are Mrs. Lizzie McCrory, residing at Clarence street, Belfast; Robert Smiley, taxi-driver, Malcomson street, Belfast, and Patrick Rooney, Sevastopol street, Belfast.

Mrs. McCrory and her husband, Mr. Felix McCrory, who was also injured, belong to Lucan, County Dublin, Mr. McCrory being a fitter in the Free State Air Service. He was to go to Valentia in connection with the arrival of the Italian Air Armada. His wife's condition last night was stated to be rather serious.

It appears that the party of five were setting out for Belfast in a taxi after seeing a friend off at Moville for America. At a street corner the taxi crashed into a telegraph pole, overturned, and was completely smashed, the occupants being thrown on the road.

MUSIC AT BRAY.

A concert of light music was given by Bill Hogan and his Variety Orchestra on Bray Esplanade on Wednesday. The orchestra, following its masked appearance of the previous Wednesday, had been engaged by the Urban District Council for the performance. A special programme of light music was played, and proved extremely popular with the large audience. The newest numbers, as well as all the old favourites, were played, and, judging by the ovation, the crowd enjoyed itself to the full.

William Bell (45), Lisnamulligan, Rathfriland, who fell from his bicycle when returning from a football match on Monday evening, has died in Newry Union Hospital. At the inquest a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

The Abbey Ballet : The Passing of the Kidney-Paver.

"House Full."

I was delighted to see the "House Full" notices hung outside the Abbey Theatre on Tuesday night, when the "ballet week" opened; for, in my opinion, no Abbey shows are more important than these far too rare performances. I have seen every one of them since the School of Ballet came into existence some years ago, and have never ceased to deplore the fact that until this occasion they failed to capture the fancy of the Dublin public, which rolls up in its thousands for shows of infinitely less value. Perhaps, the success of this week's performances will induce the Abbey directors to open the School again. Why they closed it just as it had begun to give shows of real merit I cannot imagine. The six or seven girls who constituted its nucleus, and are dancing so admirably this week, are now fine artists; and I firmly believe that, if the School had been given a chance to show its paces more frequently than three times a year or thereabouts, it would have established itself as one of the real "high lights" of Dublin. All honour is due to the various members who have carried on the traditions of the School so capably for many months after its abandonment by the theatre.

The Abbey School.

If the Abbey is to remain a national theatre, its job is to put on a lot more programmes of this week's type. The public, I admit, has hitherto been slow to respond, because it still holds the doctrine that local dancers cannot be compared with the cross-Channel vintage, forgetting, first, that Ireland has turned out many of the finest dancers on the modern stage, and, secondly, that such a tutor as Miss Ninette de Valois—an Irish woman herself—is capable of directing pupils up to any standard. I believe that, if the Abbey had "boosted" its School more thoroughly, the School would have been made a financial, as well as an artistic success; and I hope that a series of good houses this week will open the directors' eyes.

Plays for Dancers.

There is ample material for a good ballet troupe not only in ballet proper, but in those admirable plays—among the best of his work—that Mr. W. B. Yeats has written for dancers. These have been grossly neglected in the past, because—apart from the too sporadic shows of the Abbey School of Ballet—there has been nobody to perform them. Nobody but Mr. Yeats has ever written anything quite like them, and I defy anyone who sees this week's performance of "The Hawk's Well" to declare with his hand on his heart that it is not nobler entertainment than three-quarters of the Abbey's normal repertoire. Here we have a chance in Ireland to develop a new art-form, but the chance must be lost if the only theatre capable of performing the little plays as they ought to be performed deliberately sacrifices its dancers. The Abbey Theatre is continually crying out for new work to perform, but it spurns the excellent stuff lying in its hand.

Distinguished Americans.

The American Medical Association is represented at the B.M.A. Conference by its President, Dr. Dean Lewis, Professor of Surgery at the famous Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. Professor Lewis is one of the greatest authorities on abdominal surgery, and his book, "Lewis's System of Surgery," in thirteen volumes, is the standard manual for American medicals. Another distinguished American specialist here this week is Dr. Emil Novak, the Associate Professor of Gynæcology in the same university as Dr. Lewis. Professor Lewis is specially celebrated for his original research work in the field of endo-crinology. He is accompanied by his wife and daughter, and is staying in Dublin as the guest of the Master of the Rotunda Hospital. This is by way of being a return visit; for Dr. Solomons is a great friend of Dr. Novak, and enjoyed his hospitality when he was lecturing in America.

The Kidney-Paver.

The re-making of the city streets is one of the principal methods adopted at Belfast for the relief of the unemployed. That work involves the working-class districts as well as the business centres. In those districts the change now taking place might not inaptly be described as the passing of the "kidney-paver," the miniature boulder, which, as ammunition, played so prominent a part in the political faction fights of the "good" old days. Should there ever be a renewal of such hostilities, he will be a sturdy individual who succeeds in obtaining fighting material from the new surfaces. Even the redoubtable Fionn MacCumhnail himself, who formed Lough Neagh by tearing the Isle of Man from its native bed, would only break his finger-nails if he tried to glaum a handful of the rigid concrete.

The Tennis Neck.

In an old bound copy of a certain provincial newspaper that placed a good deal of emphasis upon the growing love of sport, I found a facetious reference to a new complaint called "tennis neck." For some time, I gathered, players had suffered from the muscular handicap of "tennis elbow"; the new disability, however, attacked the onlookers, rather than the stars. Watching the sideline crowd at Wilton place the other day, while representatives of Ireland and of Germany were playing, I felt sure there would be many "tennis necks" among those spectators next morning. As if they were worked by machinery, the heads turned towards one end of the court, then to the other, with a short rest between the games. One onlooker, who obviously did not care greatly about the result, satisfied himself with keeping his gaze fixed upon one end of the court only. When taken to task by his friend, he said reasonably: "Isn't the ball sure to come back, anyway?" But it didn't; not always.

Carlingford.

A correspondent writes: Not many people know of the wealth of archæological and historical remains that may be found in some of our smaller country towns. Carlingford, Co. Louth, for example, contains no less than three castles, an abbey, and many other smaller mediæval buildings. One of the castles was erected by King John, of famous, or infamous, memory, in the year 1210. It stands on a commanding site overlooking the lough, and is in an excellent state of preservation. The abbey was founded in 1305 by Richard de Burgh, Earl of Ulster, for the Dominican Order. A mint was established in the town in 1467, and the building in which it was located still stands. One of the castles is named after the well-known family of Taaffe, who were Earls of Carlingford up to the 18th century. A famous Austrian Imperial Chancellor was a descendant of an Irish emigré of this race, and the present representative of the family in Austria, Count Taaffe, recently married Miss Grace MacLoughlin, who is well-known in Irish society.

QUIDNUNC.

QUEEN'S INSTITUTE OF NURSING.

SPLENDID WORK OF IRISH BRANCH.

The Queen's Institute of District Nursing ranks high among the active philanthropic bodies in the country. Founded in 1887, the Irish branch owes its existence to a thanks-offering fund raised by Irish women in celebration of Queen Victoria's jubilee in that year, and of her diamond jubilee in 1897. The accumulated interest on the fund provides for the long and thorough training undergone by the "Jubilee" nurses, as they are popularly known.

Throughout Ireland these nurses are doing good. There are more than 250 of them, and last year they paid over two million calls in all parts of the country. The Institute, in fact, employs the largest number of fully-trained and State-registered nurses in Ireland, and is responsible for training all the nurses working under the Lady Dudley scheme, and in St. Patrick's and St. Lawrence's Homes.

The opening of beautiful gardens throughout Ireland is among the schemes which provide for the £4,000 annual cost of the branch's work; a sum of £10,000 has been raised in this way during the last three years. There has been inaugurated recently a scheme of penny-a-week contributions, and this idea has been adopted by very many of the new local associations which are constantly enlarging the scope of the Institute in Ireland. The scheme originated in Edinburgh, where the amazing sum of £3,000 in halfpennies was raised in the first year.

"At present only the strictest economy, the lack of that expensive red-tape, and the fact that nurses in their work do not expect an eight-hour day, make it possible for us to get along," Miss Coburn, the Institute's superintendent for all-Ireland, told an Irish Times reporter. Miss Coburn added: "Our dearest ambition is that every home in Ireland shall have within call a fully-trained 'Jubilee' nurse."

It is of interest to note that these nurses, apart from sick-nursing, are qualified school-nurses, health-visitors, maternity and child-welfare workers, and tuberculosis nurses; in this way they earn from public authorities half of their salaries. The local associations provide the rest.

Major G. A. Mitchell, Lieutenant J. I. Scott and Sergeant W. Leys, of the 51st Highland Divisional Engineers, were injured yesterday in an explosion at the Engineers' Territorial camp, near Stirling. A party of the 236th Field Company, Aberdeen, were carrying out demolitions when there was a premature explosion of gunpowder, and the officers and the sergeant were injured.

ELIXIR MADE OF GOLD AND BRAINS

Doctor's claim to put 10 years on life

A new Elixir of Life which, it is claimed, will lengthen man's life on earth by 10 years, was on view at the London Medical Exhibition recently.

The preparation is the discovery of an Italian doctor, who has spent 20 years on his investigations. It consists of

Gold Platinum
Iodine Palladium
Brain Extracts

and many other ingredients. (Palladium is a rare metal of the platinum group.)

The inventor claims that his elixir will arrest senile decay. It is in liquid form and is taken in minute doses only.

BADGE OF FREE STATE ARMY MEDICAL CORPS.

DIANCECHT NOT OVERLOOKED.

General Peadar MacMahon, Secretary, Free State Department of Defence, writes:—"In the article entitled "The Irish Asclepios," which appears in the Supplement to the Irish Times of the 25th instant, your contributor creates the impression that among the figures of Irish mythology Diancecht has been overlooked in modern days. This is not accurate. The tradition concerning this ancient healer has been embodied in the badge of the Army Medical Service—a silver hand forming the centre-piece. The badge, designed by the late Professor Sigerson and the present Director Medical Services, has been in existence for ten years. I enclose a descriptive summary explanatory of its component parts, together with a brief reference to St. Bricin, in whose honour the general military hospital in Dublin is named.

"The Army has not been unmindful of ancient tradition when opportunity offered of linking up appropriately with the past."

General MacMahon has kindly supplied us with the following additional particulars:—

"The badge of the Army Medical Services consists of a silver hand inset in a bronze oval.

"The silver hand recalls the tradition that Nuadad, Chieftain of the Tuatha de Danaan, lost his hand in the battle of South Moytura, near Cong, about 1,000 years B.C.

"The loss of a limb constituted so serious a blemish in those days that a maimed person could not be king, and consequently Nuadad had an artificial hand of silver made by the artificer Credne Céard, and fitted by the physician Diancecht, so that he might succeed to the sovereignty. For that reason he was known as 'Nuadad Airgead Lamh.'

"This tradition of the early pagan days of our country contains the earliest reference in Western European literature to a successful operation and replacement.

"The green background of the hand is supplied by the collar-band of the uniform.

"The bronze oval consists laterally of bay-leaves, round which a serpent is twined. The bay-leaves are joined above by a scroll containing the superscription, 'Oglaig na hEireann'; below by a second scroll, on which appears the motto, 'Comraind Legis.'

"The serpent, which is universally recognised as a symbol of healing, recalls another tradition found in the 'Book of Invasions,' to the effect that Gaedheal, the supposed ancestor of the Irish, was bitten by a viper in Egypt and cured by Moses with the brazen serpent. The scar of the snake-bite remained green, and he was known subsequently as Gaedheal Glas

"The motto in the lower scroll, 'Comraind Legis'—a Middle Irish form of the modern Irish 'Comhroinn Leighis'—is taken from the version of the 'Cattle-Spoil of Cooley,' found in the Book of Leinster. This MS. was compiled in 1150 A.D., prior to the English invasion of our country, and deals with a period of civil war shortly before the Christian Era. 'The two chief heroes of the Saga—Cuchalainn and Ferdiad—engage in single combat on successive days at a ford on the Ulster border and at night share their herbs of healing with each other. This chivalrous action was described by the compiler of the MS. in the words 'Comraind Legis' (equal division of healing), which may be freely translated as 'impartial treatment of the wounded'—a worthy motto for a Medical Service

"The Patron Saint of the chief Military Hospital, Dublin—St. Bricin's—had a school of medicine at Tomregan, Belturbet, in the 7th century, and is credited with having performed a successful trephining operation on the famous Ceannfhaoladh, wounded in the battle of Moira (634 A.D.).

"Bricin is the form in which this saint's name occurs in the 'Leabhar Breac' (14th century), the 'Martyrology of Donegal' (17th century), O'Curry's 'Manuscript Materials' and 'Manners and Customs of Ancient Ireland,' Most Rev. Dr. Healy's 'Schools and Scholars of Ancient Ireland,' O'Hanlon's 'Lives of Irish Saints,' etc. In the 'Feilire Oenghusa' his name occurs under the date '5th September.' There are numerous saints called Brecan, but not with medical associations."

BRITISH MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

USE OF ALCOHOL IN FEVER CASES.

AN OVER-RATED STIMULANT.

INTERESTING PAPERS READ AT SCIENCE SECTIONS.

SPEAKING at the Royal Hibernian Hotel, Dublin, yesterday morning, Dr. C. Killick Millard, the Medical Officer of Health for Leicester, made some strong comments on parties where "young persons are plied with alcoholic refreshment." The amount of drink taken at such parties, he said, was quite enough to impair the judgment of anyone who had afterwards to drive a motor car, and it was not fair or right to offer young people something under the name of hospitality which could very easily prove to be their undoing.

The occasion was the sixty-third annual breakfast given by the National Temperance League in conjunction with the British Medical Association, and the chair was taken by Mr. Charles E. Jacob, J.P., Vice-President of the National Temperance League. Dr. T. Gillman Moorhead, President of the B.M.A., also attended.

DRINK AT EVENING PARTIES.

Mr. Charles Jacob welcomed the guests on behalf of the National Temperance League, and wished them success in the conference and a pleasant time in Dublin. He thanked them for the interest they had shown in the Temperance League by their presence at the breakfast, and for the work which the medical profession had done in furthering the cause. In recent years, he said, there had been a great advance in the treatment of illness without relying on alcohol, and it was beginning to be realised that, although alcohol had its uses for certain serious cases, it should be given with the greatest care. Doctors had taken up this point of view extensively, and he asked their further co-operation in discouraging the use of alcohol as far as possible.

Dr. C. Killick Millard, the Leicester Medical Officer of Health, then delivered his address. Alcohol, he said, had been associated with fever hospital practice in former years, and it was the custom at the end of the last century to prescribe it freely in all serious cases, in accordance with a theory that it acted as a cardiac stimulant. If the patient got worse or died, it was supposed to be in spite of alcohol, while if he recovered alcohol got all the credit.

AN OVERRATED STIMULANT.

After some time, however, a different teaching began to prevail. Doubts grew as to the validity of the alcohol treatment, and these were strengthened by the example of the London Temperance Hospital, which used no alcohol whatever and still obtained good results. From personal experience, he (the speaker) could say that its effect as a stimulant had been overrated, the pulse showed no improvement after brandy or whiskey, in fact, the patient did better without them. The truth was that alcohol was a depressant rather than a stimulant, and in most cases proved to be an additional handicap to a patient. After a while he gave up administering alcohol altogether, and the results in Leicester were very favourable as compared with those in other fever hospitals.

There was another aspect of alcohol which raised a question of very great importance—its use by motor drivers. Scientific investigation had proved that the effect of alcohol on the central nervous system begins long before the stage of intoxication is reached, and would be enough to impair a man's efficiency as a motor driver. For this reason, many private owners preferred teetotalers for chauffeurs, while, in public transport companies, there were stringent regulations to prevent their drivers drinking while on duty.

EVENING PARTIES.

"But what are we to say," continued Dr. Millard, "of those evening parties where young people are plied with alcoholic refreshment, which usually far exceeds what they are normally accustomed to? At the average dinner party a start is made with cocktails (containing, perhaps, 30 per cent. of alcohol), then comes sherry, containing 18 per cent., and during the dinner other light wines are served, containing about 16 per cent. Afterwards there is port (20 per cent.), and a liqueur (40 per cent.) is served with the coffee, while during the rest of the evening there are usually whiskies and sodas, each whiskey containing about 40 per cent. Even provided that the young person only samples each drink once—though, considering the well-known attentiveness of waiters, that is unlikely—most of them, as motor drivers, are 'under the influence' by the time the evening is over. They then drive home, and, perhaps, an accident happens, which may involve them in disgrace or worse.

"Is it fair or right to offer young people something under the name of hospitality which can very easily prove to be their undoing? If that is hospitality, we should change our ideas of what hospitality means, and we can say, as Cassio in 'Othello': 'I could well wish that courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.'"

DR. MOORHEAD'S VIEW.

Dr. Moorhead, who moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Jacob and Dr. Millard, said that a study of the balance sheets of the Dublin hospitals would show a practice in accordance with the suggestions of the last speaker; for the money spent there on alcohol was negligible. He was in full agreement with Dr. Millard's remarks on the subject of motoring, and felt that public opinion should compel Justices to deal severely with those who were responsible for accidents while under the influence of drink. Only by severity could such a state of affairs be put down.

He recalled that their meeting in Dublin that morning was very appropriate, as it was a hundred years ago that the temperance campaign was started in Ireland. Following the example of the movement in England, a party of Quakers in Cork had started a campaign, and one of those associated with their efforts was a young priest, Theobald Mathew. In 1833 Father Mathew announced his intention of devoting the rest of his life to temperance reform, and his name was now famous. He gave the pledge to 25,000 people in Cork and to 70,000 in Dublin, and finally returned from a long campaign in England, having given the pledge to 600,000 people. His work, said Dr. Moorhead, would receive a stimulus from their present meeting.

Sir William de Courcey Wheeler and Dr. W. McAdam Eccles also spoke, after which Mr. Jacob made a brief reply.

The other guests, who numbered over a hundred, included—Sir Ewen J. Maclean, Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Dr. E. K. le Fleming (Chairman, Representative Body), Sir Henry Brackenbury, Sir Robert Bolam, Professor Arthur H. Burgess, Dr. G. C. Anderson, Dr. J. P. Shanley, Dr. E. Pearce Gould, Professor J. T. Wigham, Dr. Courtenay C. Weeks, Mr. N. Bishop Harman, Professor J. W. Bigger, Dame Louise McIlroy, Professor John Hay, Professor J. M. Beattie, Dr. Frank Crawley, Dr. C. O. Hawthorne, Dr. Gordon Holmes, Professor T. P. C. Kirkpatrick, Dr. G. Harrison Orton, Professor R. J. Rowlette, Dr. M. J. Russell, Dr. Bethel Solomons, and Alderman Hubbard Clark.

NEW ANÆSTHETIC.

LONDON DOCTOR AND INTERESTING DRUG.

A drug that can be administered so easily that the patient does not know he is being placed under an anæsthetic was described by Dr. G. H. Morrison, London, in the Section of Pharmacology and Therapeutics.

It was known as evipan, he said, and was in the form of a small ampoule. It would replace the big gas oxygen plant at present used by doctors and dentists. When injected into the veins of the patient it produced immediate unconsciousness.

This drug would be of great service in the case of road-side accidents. Before the patient realised what was happening he would be rendered unconscious and would remain in a stupor for four or five minutes, enabling fractures to be set without delay.

KNOWLEDGE OF ANÆMIAS.

A ROMANCE OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Speaking in the Section of Diseases of Children on "The Deficiency Anæmias of Childhood," Dr. Leonard G. Parsons, M.D., F.R.C.P., Professor of Diseases of Children, University of Birmingham; Physician to the Children's and General Hospitals, Birmingham, said:—

"The story of the growth of knowledge of these anæmias forms one of the romances of modern medicine, and, although its most dramatic chapters are those concerned with pernicious anæmia, yet the deficiency anæmias of childhood provide many incidents of great interest. The story opens about the year 1920, but a fitting prologue to it is formed by the researches, in the last decade of the nineteenth century, of Bunge and his pupil, Abderhalden, who showed that the total amount of iron present in the liver and spleen was highest at birth and fell progressively until the end of the lactation period, and also that anæmia could be produced by keeping animals on a milk diet for a considerable time after the normal lactation period.

"The latter observation is turned to practical use in Switzerland, where, in order to produce a particularly white veal, calves are fed only on milk and are muzzled to prevent them from obtaining other food. In the year 1920 Whipple and his colleagues at the University of Rochester, N.Y., began a series of experiments with the object of determining the rate of hæmoglobin formation in dogs previously rendered anæmic by repeated bleedings and receiving a diet low in iron. In these investigations it was found that whole liver and also kidney were effective curative agents, and Whipple's first paper, published in 1925, aroused great interest and stimulated fresh research on anæmias.

"To be strictly accurate, all deficiency anæmias should be called nutritional anæmias, but the title 'nutritional anæmia of infants' has come to be associated with those forms of deficiency anæmias which are due to an inadequate supply of iron (or iron and copper). The importance and frequency of this type of anæmia has only been recognised within recent years, but in large measure to the work of Helen Mackay, who, as a result of examining a large series of London babies, found that a mild degree of anæmia was almost always present, whether these were breast-fed or artificially fed; that this anæmia could be cured or prevented by the daily administration of 4½ to 9 grains of iron and ammonium citrate unless severe infection was present; and that the morbidity rate in babies with anæmia was double that of iron-treated babies. It is usually observed from the seventh month onward until a natural cure occurs as the result of the child taking a satisfactory mixed diet for some little time.

"A baby suffering from nutritional anæmia, although pale, is frequently well grown and well nourished. The degree of pallor varies considerably, and may be very marked; on the other hand, if the baby is crying or near a fire the anæmia, unless considerable, is not obvious to the eye.

"Neither breast nor cow's milk contains sufficient iron for the needs of the growing babe. Cow's milk contains less iron and less copper than breast milk, and, according to Blauberg, a breast-fed baby retains five times the amount of iron retained by a baby fed on cow's milk. In those early researches of Bunge and Abderhalden to which reference has already been made it was demonstrated that, in addition to a progressive fall in the iron stores in the liver and spleen from birth to the end of the lacation period, the amount of iron per kilogram of body weight also fell progressively during that period."

ACUTE OTITIS MEDIA.

AFTERMATH OF INFECTIOUS FEVERS.

Opening a discussion in the Section of Oto-Rhino-Laryngology upon the "Treatment of Acute Otitis Media in Acute Febrile Conditions," Dr. T. O. Graham, M.C., M.D., F.R.C.S.I., surgeon for ear, nose and throat, Royal City of Dublin and Royal Victoria Eye and Ear Hospitals, said they might assume that practically all cases of acute otitis media arising in acute febrile conditions developed as the result of a spread of infection from the nasopharynx along the Eustachian tube to the middle-ear cleft.

This was particularly prone to occur in young children who had enlarged adenoids and tonsils when they developed a common "cold in the head," or suffered from any of the acute infectious fevers. It was estimated that the common "cold in the head" and influenza were responsible for more cases of acute otitis media than all the other infectious fevers combined. The percentage of middle-ear infections in influenza varied greatly in different epidemics. This was true also of all the infectious fevers, but probably about 10 per cent. of scarlet fever and measles patients developed an acute otitis media, about five per cent. of diphtheria patients, and a much smaller percentage of mumps, typhoid, and whooping-cough patients.

Having dealt with his subject in some detail, Dr. Graham concluded with the advice that in the early stage of acute otitis media abortive measures, such as rest in bed, administration of a purge, steam inhalations of friar's balsam, drops of warm glycerine of carbolic, a rubber hot-water bag to the ear, might suffice to bring about resolution and cure. If this was ineffective the drum membrane should be freely incised and adequate drainage of the tympanic cavity and of the mastoid antrum, via the aditus, afforded. This might bring about a restitution to normal of an infected mastoid. If temperature persisted in spite of adequate drainage, and mastoid pain and tenderness increased, and the patient was obviously not improving, mastoidotomy became imperative, and should not be unduly delayed.

"GET FAT AND KEEP WISE."

CAUSES OF MENTAL DISORDERS.

THE DANGER OF SMOKING.

THERE was a great deal of good advice in the remarks of Mr. H. R. C. Rutherford, F.R.C.S.I., Medical Superintendent, Farnham House, Finglas, Co. Dublin, who opened a discussion, before the Section of Neurology and Psychological Medicine, on "The Family Physician's Rôle in the Prevention of Mental Disorder and Defect."

Speaking of senility as the greatest insanity-producing period of life, Mr. Rutherford said:—"In this and other critical periods, I would emphasise the importance of rest, and preach the gospel of fatness, which, in the earlier periods of life, at any rate, is nearly always accompanied by mental fitness."

"One contemplates with some alarm the future of a generation yet unborn, the mothers of which are harassed with a desire for slimness and excessive smoking," said Mr. Rutherford. "I have known excessive smoking to be the only apparent exciting cause in several cases, and, indeed, I regard it as being a fairly common contributory cause of mental illness. Its effects are not so obvious as those of alcohol, for alcohol, if taken in sufficient quantities, will soon terminate the desire for its consumption by means of the production of an acute psychosis; but in the case of excessive smoking the effects are insidious, with the production of gastric disturbances, loss of appetite, and a generally lowered physical condition, which make a mental attack likely to occur with little other provocation."

Nothing but good could be said of marriage, for in the married the incidence of mental disease was low, but slightly higher among women, as a result of the risk of child-bearing. The loss of a husband or wife increased to a marked extent the liability, and, indeed, up to 55 years of age, the prevalence of it was almost double that among married men and women. In the case of single men and women between 35 and 55 years of age, it was nearly three times as high as in the married. It was pointed out, however, that a process of selection had been at work among the married, who might be regarded as a picked lot.

Having referred to the frequency with which subthyroidal symptoms were met with in a large mental hospital, Mr. Rutherford said it was a matter for regret that the valuable eyebrow sign first described by Hertoghe was no longer available in many of the younger women of to-day, owing to the development of the habit of eyebrow-plucking and its replacement by a thin black line. "I have sometimes thought that the idea of this must have originated in the brain of some keen beauty expert, who did not fail to recognise the tendency for the irregular and early disappearance of the hair in this region—a somewhat difficult feature for his art to overcome—and so he called up the aid of Dame Fashion to decree its complete removal."

"We have enough evidence to justify the belief that the thyroid gland plays a very large part in the production of mental disease and defect, and therefore that every sign of a deficiency in its secretion should be treated early and with persistence. Further, patients suffering from goitre, even though of the simple variety, must be regarded with suspicion concerning their future mental history, and every effort should be made to cure them of this condition, which cannot be anything but a dangerous one. In the case of marriage and subsequent issue, this issue will be particularly liable to mental illness. I have noted for many years the frequency with which patients suffering from mental trouble can be found to have mothers or maternal aunts who suffer from goitre. Indeed, the visits of relatives have often suggested to me, by their subthyroidal appearance, the advisability of placing the patient on thyroid treatment, when often the patient would not present any obvious subthyroidal symptom."

Mr. Rutherford described the critical age periods as the adolescence, the climacteric and the senescence. To his mind, he said, the fact seemed somewhat significant that mental illness should be of such rarity in those under 15 years of age, for would it not point to an absence of any marked inherent defect in the nervous tissue of the child? The changes in the social status at this age period, the necessity for adjusting himself to the ordinary difficulties of life, without the same amount of protection hitherto given to him by the parent, the sex problems, and the ordinary sex attractions incidental to youth—all these must have some bearing.

There would appear, however, to be little attention paid to the influence of the very difficult period of school life. The advance of education and the necessity for receiving and retaining in one's memory a large amount of facts and figures which might (or might not) be useful in a later period imposed one of the most difficult strains to be experienced in life. When it was remembered that at adolescence the brain was immature, and that, although mental illness might have been absent up to the school age, yet is was likely that minor physical disturbances had been present for many years, and perhaps even since birth, it would not seem a matter of surprise that psychoses occurred frequently at this period.

A HAPHAZARD GROWTH.

SCOTTISH DOCTOR ON HEALTH SERVICES.

The Chief Medical Officer of the Scottish Department of Health (Dr. J. L. Brownlie) spoke in the Section of Public Health upon "National Health Policy." The health services, he said, had grown up haphazard.

"From crude beginnings at control of infection they now embrace a range of scattered activities that include sanitation, infectious diseases services, with special branches for tuberculosis and venereal diseases, school medical service, maternity and child welfare, industrial medical inspection, national health insurance, and several others. Each development of a service or addition to the number of services was made in response to some special need or feeling of the times. The result," said Dr. Brownlie, "is a congeries of disparate activities. The insurance practitioner works in his field, the child welfare officer in his, the school medical officer in his, and none is inspired by the feeling that he is linked to the others by a common purpose

"It is my own belief, and the belief of many others, that we cannot and should not expect to solve our problems of defective results or organisation until we have arrived at a definition of policy that would unify, so far as is possible, the whole range of activities bearing on the health of the people. That is not a job solely, or even primarily, for medical men; but the medical man must make his contribution along with the biologist, sociologist, administrator, and the plain citizen."

The Chairman (Dr. Frazer, M.O.H., Liverpool) said no population had come through an industrial crisis so well from the physical point of view as the population of the British Isles, largely because of the fact that the public services were founded on right lines and had been ably administered.

Dr. Milligan, Glossop, suggested that each health authority should have an advisory committee consisting of representatives of the local division of the British Medical Association. He considered that medical benefits should be included in the Free State health insurance scheme.

Dr. C. Bastible, M.O.H., Wexford, mentioned that 20,000 persons were under restraint in Irish mental hospitals, and spoke of the value of early treatment in mental cases.

THOSE who missed "The Road to Ireland" that was given in the B.B.C. National programme on Wednesday night have a further chance of hearing it to-night, when it will be given in the Regional programme at 9.15. On Wednesday night Mr. Filson Young's "romantic journey" along the road from London to Holyhead was discovered to be a truly delightful entertainment. It was admirably produced, and only one criticism occurred to me—that while the incidental music was cunningly selected and cleverly timed, the way in which it was blown in strong gusts through every break in the dialogue became somewhat irritating.

Immediate pleasure was given at the start by the ingenious choice of the first part of Gershwin's "American in Paris," as incidental music to suggest the romantic traveller's commencement of his journey at London's raucously busy centre.

Later the well-known "Post-horn Gallop" gave the right setting for the account of a journey by stage coach after the completion of Telford's road from London to Holyhead almost a hundred years ago, when the scheduled time for the run was twenty-seven hours. All the "effects" required for the illustration of Mr. Young's historical fantasy were very cleverly done, but none more so than those in the final part of the story, representing the sound of the Holyhead express train passing along the North Wales coast, and its arrival at Holyhead Station, followed by the departure of the mail boat for Kingstown.

Mr. Filson Young's romantic traveller sets out to drive his motor car from London to Holyhead, and, before Barnet, is joined by the ghost of Thomas Telford, the engineer, who designed and built not only the great trunk road, but also the suspension bridge across the Menai Straits. Telford's ghost continues to be his companion as far as that bridge, which it desires to revisit, and, en route, there is an interesting and impressive revelation of the character and foresight of the worthy engineer. Other ghostly passengers are an Irish M.P., who tells of the hardships of the journey at the beginning of the last century, and of the agitation raised by some of the worst sufferers, the Irish representatives—who had to attend Parliament in London after the Act of Union—to have the route improved; and a stage coach driver, who recalls notable drivers and great performances on the road between the time of its completion and the end of coaching, when the railway was built. Another companion on part of the journey is a Welsh patriot, whose conversation enlivens the time between Shrewsbury and Bangor. The whole thing is admirably done.

A variety half hour by Tony Reddin and Company will be the form taken by Philco's sponsored programme from the Dublin Station at 10.15.

A description of the arrival of the Italian massed flight at Valentia will be broadcast by the Athlone and Dublin Stations as soon as possible after the machines reach the island.

LAND BILL'S SLOW PROGRESS.

THE COLLECTION OF LAND ANNUITY ARREARS.

GOVERNMENT CANNOT FORGIVE THEM ALTOGETHER.

THE debate on the Land Bill, in the Dail yesterday, was even more dull than any of those which preceded it this week, but a number of subsections were disposed of, as well as amendments by members of the Opposition.

Farmers' losses owing to the economic dispute were again discussed, and Mr. Aiken, the Minister in charge of the bill, announced that the Government had not the slightest intention of forgiving the land annuities altogether. He was told later by Mr. Dillon that Fianna Fail was responsible for a loss to the country of six millions—a sum twice as large as the annuities.

When the adjournment came the House was debating an Opposition amendment, which would give defaulting tenants the right to appear before a District Justice and state that they did not owe the arrears of the annuity for which a warrant had been issued by the Land Commission.

"WORSE THAN ANY BRITISH ACT."

The debate on Mr. Dillon's amendment to the Land Bill, which was moved on the previous day, to delete Sub-Section 2 of Section 12, dealing with the funding of land annuities arrears, payable during the three years ending on the first gale day of 1933, was continued.

Mr. P. BELTON (C. na nG., Dublin Co.) said that it was unfair for the Minister to state, as he had done, that the Government was bearing the loss of the unpaid annuities. These losses were deducted from the grants to the County Council.

The Land Bill, he declared, was the most monstrous piece of iniquitous legislation ever attempted by a native legislature. The British Government had never anything like this to its credit in legislation for Ireland.

This section said that they were to continue to pay £5,000,000 a year, and while they were going to have land annuities reduced by 50 per cent., they were to pay five million a year. It was a land tax on the people, and the people should stand out and say that they had paid their land annuities, and would not pay them again.

Mr. F. LYNCH (C. na nG., Kerry) said that every farmer in the House knew that where payments were made during the last twelve months it was not out of agricultural produce they were paid, but out of reserves. There were not many people who had reserves; the people were incapable of paying, and as long as this bill stood for the refunding of arrears from 1931 to 1932 he thought it was a very bad one.

On a division the amendment was defeated by 59 votes to 40.

The SPEAKER said that Mr. Dillon had intimated that he would accept the voting on this amendment as covering a number of others standing in his name. These amendments, numbering fourteen, would therefore not be moved.

THE FUNDED ARREARS.

Mr. McDERMOT (C.P., Roscommon) asked the Minister if he would forego the costs entailed in civil bill proceedings in connection with defaulting annuitants for the gales since the beginning of the economic war.

Mr. AIKEN replied that the Government had decided to withdraw all costs in respect of proceedings for the first gale of 1932.

Mr. BRENNAN (C. na nG., Roscommon) asked if the Minister would agree to take into account only half of the arrears which were to be funded. There was, he said, really no case for their collection at all.

Mr. AIKEN said that it was not every farmer who was paying for the economic war. Those who were producing things that were protected here were not paying, and another section who were shouting the loudest, the graziers, were not paying. The Government had not the slightest intention of forgiving the land annuities altogether. The arrears that had been funded could be treated as a loan, and any farmer could pay them and so avoid the 4½ per cent. interest. If the Government tried to collect the bad debts in the way of the annuities left them by the Cumann na nGaedheal Government they wuold be putting five or six thousand farmers on the roadside.

MR. COSGRAVE'S RETORT.

Mr. COSGRAVE (Cumann na nGaedheal, Cork) said that the arrears were largely the result of the propaganda that was carried on by the front bench, when, under the sign-manual of the so-called Minister for Home Affairs of the Republic in 1922, people were warned not to pay their Land Commission annuities. When the Land Commission was taken over in 1923 the annuities arrears were £642,639, and after nine years the arrears had been reduced to £526,095.

It might be that some people who owe land annuities, and were able to pay them, were not paying them at all. If a person was unable to pay owing to loss of stock, or other reasons, by all means wipe out the arrears; but they should not adopt an arbitary manner, and ask people to pay arrears for those who could pay them and were not paying them. There was not one per cent. of the farmers of the country who had not lost during the past twelve months owing to the policy of the Government. The country had been rushed into the economic conflict with Great Britain, and the Cumann na nGaedheal Party were prepared to support the Government in any case they could make to the British Government to show that the farmers were unable to pay their annuities.

OWNERSHIP OF THE LAND.

He did not agree that the State owned the land. If a farmer undertook to purchase his land and to pay the annuities, the land was his, and not the property of the State, which was only an agent in the matter. In the economic conflict with England there were two Governments endeavouring to collect the same money. The Minister would be well advised to review the whole situation, and to see whether it was possible for the farmers to pay £3,000,000 to the British Government and £2,000,000 in Land Commission annuities in the future, and, in addition, £100,000 annually for the funding of the arrears. In his opinion, the country could not do it.

It would have been possible, in his view, during the past twelve months to get a fair and equitable settlement of the matter, but it could not be done unless it was made in a fair and reasonable manner, and unless there was less politics and more business brought into the matter.

Mr. DAVIN (Labour, Leix-Offaly) said that he had a strong objection to the policy of the Government to make one set of honest farmers pay for another set of farmers, and he was opposed to the remission of total debts due by 6,000 or 7,000 farmers. He knew cases of idle ranchers who were getting out of paying their annuities at the expense of small farmers and cottiers. He suggested that the issue would not be one for discussion in the House at all if the Ministers and ex-Ministers would think more of their country and less of their parties.

SIX MILLIONS LOST.

DEPUTY AND FIANNA FAIL.

Mr. DILLON (C.P., Donegal) said that since Fianna Fail came into power they had cost the country six million pounds—twice as much as the land annuities. They had the Acting Minister for Lands and Fisheries saying that it was the policy of the Government to impose a land tax on the people.

Mr. AIKEN intervened to say that the Deputy was quoting from a speech made by Deputy Belton.

Mr. DILLON said that the Acting Minister in replying to a speech made by Deputy Belton had said that deputies could call it a land tax or anything they liked, but the Government was going to impose a burden on the farmers as much as the land could bear.

The Minister had the effrontery to tell them that the farmers were not suffering at all, that if they were getting less for their cattle they were paying less for them. But what of the small farmer, from whom they bought the cattle—the class which represented the great bulk of the people in this country? Were they not suffering?

There was, he continued, no inducement to produce, if the production had to be made at a loss; the more the farmer produced the more he lost. In the future farmers would not be able to pay their rates, annuities or anything else, except with the assistance of doles.

Mr. CORRY (Fianna Fail, East Cork) said that the Government had been accused of being generous with other people's money, and that the money belonged to the county councils, whose agricultural grants were now to be reduced. The bill, however, would set on their feet the farmers who had been in arrears, and that would help the county councils.

Mr. BELTON (Cumann na nGaedheal, Co. Dublin) said that the Minister had stated that some farmers were doing better than before the start of the economic war. That was not so; some of those who were producing for the home markets were even more severely hit than the exporters of live-stock. The economic effect of the reduction in the price of the stuffs they had to sell was a 40 per cent. reduction on the production and the raw material of the country. No farmer could possibly be better off than he was before the economic war.

Mr. G. C. BENNETT (Cumann na nGaedheal, Limerick) said that those who were interested in the dairy question were prepared to discuss it with the Minister for Agriculture, but certainly not with the Minister who was in charge of this bill, because he knew nothing about the subject.

Sections 12 and 13 of the bill were agreed to.

A SINKING FUND.

On Section 21,

Mr. RODDY (C. na nG., Leitrim-Sligo) asked what provision was to be made for a sinking fund to meet the funding scheme.

Mr. AIKEN said that there would be an addition of a quarter to a half per cent. for that purpose.

Mr. RODDY said that the tenant purchaser would pay 5 per cent. for fifty years for the privilege of having the arrears funded.

Mr. DILLON said that, in other words, that meant that a man who got a loan of £100 would have to pay £250 for it.

Mr. AIKEN said that the loan would be wiped out in fifty years.

On Section 26 of the bill,

Mr. DILLON (C.P., Donegal) said that the remission of £250,000 of arrears of the land annuities, which accrued due prior to 1930, was being made under the terms of that bill at the expense of the ratepayers of the country and the local authorities, and not at the expense of the Central Government.

DEFAULTING TENANTS' PROTECTION.

On Section 27 an amendment in the names of Mr. M. Roddy and Mr. F. Lynch was discussed. It was to the effect that a defaulting tenant should have the right to have his case brought before a District Justice, where he would have an opportunity of saying that he did not owe the arrears of annuities for which a warrant had been issued against him by the Land Commission.

Mr. MAGUIRE (F.F., Leitrim-Sligo) said that there would always be people who would be unable to pay their annuities, and this amendment simply meant imposing extra law costs on to accumulating arrears. The amendment would only benefit sheriffs and lawyers.

A BAILIFF'S BILL.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY (C. na nG., Mayo, S.) said that, far from being a relief in law courts to the small farmers, the bill might be described as a bill for the relief of sheriffs' bailiffs, because under the bill a lot of unemployed persons would be employed as bailffs to cope with the work. It was possible for the Land Commission officers, highly competent though they might be, to make a mistake, and, unless the amendment were accepted, the farmer would have no protection against such a mistake.

Mr. P. S. MURPHY (F.F., E. Cork) said that he had never yet seen a successful defence entered to a Land Commission process. As a lawyer the present section appealed to him more than any other section in the bill.

Mr. VICTORY (F.F., Longford-Westmeath) said he agreed with Mr. Dillon that law costs in this country were out of all proportion to what the people could bear, and the debate had, at any rate, served a useful purpose in airing the matter.

Mr. McMENAMIN (C. na nG., Donegal) described the section as a violation of the Constitution and an infringement of the rights of the citizens. Property should not be allowed to be taken without the operation of the law. The section would only enrich the sheriffs, who would become the richest class of people in the country.

The Dail adjourned until 10.30 to-day.

FARM PRODUCTS BILL IN SENATE.

REGULATION OF EXPORTS

TO MEET QUOTA SYSTEM.

MARRIED WOMEN AND MONEY-LENDERS.

IN the Free State Senate yesterday, Mr. T. Westropp Bennett presiding, the Report and final stages of the following bills were passed without discussion:—Imposition of Duties (Confirmation of Orders) Bill, 1933; Perpetual Funds (Registration) Bill, 1933; Clare Castle Pier Bill, 1933; and Shannon Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1933.

CORK TRAMWAYS.

On the Report stage of the Cork Tramways (Employés' Compensation) Bill, 1933, Mr. CROSBIE moved an amendment which, he said, was intended to cover the case of one employé of the Cork Tramways Company, so as to enable him to receive compensation under the bill.

Mr. LEMASS (Minister for Industry and Commerce) said that there was some doubt as to whether the amendment in its present form would be limited in its operation to the manager of the Cork Tramways Company. He (the Minister) would be prepared to agree to an amendment substituting March 31, 1931, for eptember 30 of the same year as the critical date in the bill.

The amendment suggested by the Minister was agreed to.

The Report and final stages were passed.

AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS.

On the Committee stage of the Agricultural Products (Regulation of Exports) Bill, 1933,

Mr. JAMESON moved an amendment to omit from Section 1, which defined agricultural products, the words, "and any article of food or drink wholly or partly manufactured or derived from any such product."

He disclaimed any intention of interfering with the Minister for Agriculture in his wish to obtain powers to enable him to deal with the quotas for which this bill was urgently required.

Under the section, as it stood, very large industries totally disconnected with agriculture were brought in to be dealt with by the Minister for Agriculture. If these industries were to be dealt with at all they should be dealt with by the Minister for Industry and Commerce. The bill brought the distilling industry within the scope of the regulations, and enabled the Minister to impose heavy penalties. He had no doubt whatever that the Minister intended this bill to apply only to agricultural products. But this section, as it now stood, could enable him to obtain from distillers detailed information of everything connected with their industry.

AMERICAN MARKET.

Since he had last spoken on the subject in the Senate he had received a communication from the Minister for Industry and Commerce drawing attention to the importance of the American market, and asking for particulars of stocks, ages of whiskey, and everything connected with the industry. It was a friendly act on the part of the Minister, and he was going to see the Minister about it, and give him every information, but his point was that the information which was asked for by the Minister for Industry and Commerce could be obtained by law by the Minister for Agriculture if the section were passed without the omission of the words, which he proposed to be deleted.

MINISTER'S INTENTIONS.

Mr. DOUGLAS said that if the present position showed signs of remaining nations would use weapons not yet known of by some Senators. There were Senators who felt that mistakes had been made in passing the bill, which could be used for different purposes. The Minister should define exactly what he wanted, or then limit the bill to pigs, with power to extend the scope of the bill later.

Mr. CROSBIE also urged that articles should be specified either in the bill or subsequently by order.

The Minister for Agriculture (Dr. RYAN) said that there was no need to be perturbed over powers to be given. Bacon, oatmeal, condensed milk and cheese were to come under the quota system before Christmas, and he wanted to have his position clear. He must issue an order for every product coming under the British quota to each country, and that order must be laid on the table, to which the Senate could object.

The Free State was compelled, if she was to take a quota from Britain, to have machinery proposed to be set up under this bill. They could not take the quota unless they had the power now sought; otherwise the Free State would get no part of the quota. The Minister could not interfere with any trade unless it was mandatory that they should be organised under the Department in order to get portion of any quota offered. Of course, if traders and manufacturers did not want to trade with any particular country, then the Minister could not make them register.

Mr. COMYN said that the Minister was not being given excessive power; in fact, he was limited in certain things.

VITAL INTERESTS.

Mr. JAMESON said that the interests concerned were more vital than the House seemed to appreciate. It appeared that stout and whiskey were being put under the control of the Minister, and he warned them that, if men who knew nothing of the industries were put to investigate the position, the industries would be broken and would soon part from the country. If ever the Government issued an order that a certain quantity, say, of whiskey or stout were to be exported before a certain date then they would be going a good way to ruin those industries. These industries were most difficult to deal with, and, moreover, the manner of conducting one's business would be laid bare to one's greatest competitors. The calculations for the various markets kept by the distillers were intricate, and so the Minister must be careful that he would not harm the industry. And the Senate should be careful too. He appealed to the Senate to postpone the further consideration of the bill until it was seen how the position of these industries would be affected.

THE CATTLE TRADE.

Mr. COUNIHAN said that if the Minister would confine the bill to pig products, etc., the Minister could have his bill to-day, but failing that it would have to be left over. Whiskey and beer were important, but the cattle trade, which came under the bill, was far more important, and he believed that if the bill was passed with its present wide scope there would be more unemployment and poverty.

Mr. JOHNSON said that the words sought to be deleted from the Free State Bill by Mr. Jameson were included in the Northern Ireland Act.

Mr. O'HANLON said that if the terrible things mentioned by Mr. Jameson were to happen to whiskey then things equally as bad would happen to other industries. Irreparable damage might be done, and in considering the bill full consideration must be given to all industries; for he was out against unfair treatment.

He moved that the bill be adjourned until August 16.

Mr. COUNIHAN seconded.

Dr. RYAN said that the postponement might be rather serious, because agents in England had urged them to hasten in setting up the machinery. If those who opposed the bill knew how it would work they would not oppose it. The bill was only to carry on the normal trade, and, further, the Government could not compel anyone to register under the bill. He was willing to put the word "registered" before persons, so that others who would not register should not be brought in under it.

Several members assented that this change would be a safeguard.

The further consideration of the Committee stage was postponed until August 16.

RESCINDED.

Later, Mr. O'HANLON moved that the motion that the Senate should not discuss the Agricultural Products Bill until August 16 be rescinded, and that the House sit again to-day at 12 o'clock.

It was explained that the Minister for Agriculture had shown to those who opposed him that there was urgency in getting the bill through. Amendments which the Minister said would satisfy the House had been prepared, and would be submitted.

The acceptance of Mr. O'Hanlon's motion was unanimous.

MONEY-LENDING.

On the Committee stage of the Moneylenders (No. 2) Bill, 1933, the Minister for Justice (Mr. Ruttledge) said that amendments in the name of Mr. Seamus Robinson had been accepted in principle in the Dail, and the Senate agreed to the amendments.

Mr. JOHNSON moved an amendment, which was accepted, to the effect that, unless a married woman was living apart from her husband, she could not get a loan without the consent and the signature of her husband.

Mr. COMYN, who supported the amendment, said that a great deal of misery and domestic unhappiness was caused by wives borrowing money from moneylenders without the knowledge of their husbands.

THE INTEREST.

Mr. JOHNSON moved a further amendment providing that it shall not be lawful for a moneylender to charge interest at a rate exceeding 60 per cent. per annum. He said that the rate might seem unduly high, and at a later stage he might move that it should not in certain circumstances exceed 25 per cent., but 60 per cent. was the rate mentioned as one that would give moneylenders ample margin to allow for bad debts and expenses. In the bill reference was made to a rate of 39 per cent., as one, any excess over which would be deemed unconscionable by the courts, and the onus of providing the reverse would lie on the moneylender.

Mr. COMYN raised the objection that a man of substantial means might on occasion need £100 in a hurry, and would be prepared to pay £8 or £10 for the accommodation for a week. That would be more than 60 per cent. per annum.

The amendment was withdrawn.

BREAKING OF CONTRACTS.

Mr. JOHNSON moved the adoption of an amendment designed to bring under the jurisdiction of the bill money-lending transactions entered into before the passing of the measure. It might be considered retrospective legislation, but he thought it necessary.

Mr. COMYN opposed the amendment, because, he said, it involved the breaking of contracts made on the faith of the prior statute.

The amendment was lost.

An amendment moved by Mr. JOHNSON for the purpose of ensuring that the loans should not be collected on Sundays was agreed to.

The Committee stage of the bill was passed, and the Report stage fixed for August 16.

The Senate adjourned until 12 noon to-day.

PAY OF CIVIC GUARD.

MR. MACENTEE'S STATEMENT.

The Garda Review, in its latest issue, contradicts the statement of Mr. MacEntee, Free State Minister for Finance, recently in the Senate to the effect that a memorandum regarding pay "cuts" submitted by the late Government had been agreed to by the Oireachtas and the Garda.

This memorandum, the Review states, was undeniably abandoned by the late Government. That Government also, it says, "abandoned the absurd theory of relating the pay of the Garda to the cost of living figure."

FREE STATE'S TRADE.

£27,000,000 FALL IN YEAR.

ADVERSE BALANCE DOWN.

THE serious effects of the economic dispute with Great Britain are clearly reflected in the trade statistics issued yesterday from the Free State Department of Industry and Commerce, covering the first six months of the present year.

As compared with the corresponding period of 1932, the total value of imports has sunk from £24,351,165 to £17,620,445, and the total value of exports from £14,325,472 to £8,759,157. For the twelve-month period ending June, 1932, and June, 1933, it is shown that the total volume of trade has declined by over £27,000,000—from £84,326,174 to £57,228,140. In other words, the Free State's trade is only 68 per cent. of what it was before the start of the economic "war."

A small measure of comfort, however, is provided by the fact that the adverse trade balance has sunk from £15,132,118 to £14,458,856; but, even so, it is higher than it has been for any year between 1927 and 1931. Live stock, the principal export, only reached a value of £3,461,055 during the last six months, as compared with £7,155,169 in the same period of 1932—a decline of over 50 per cent.

Great Britain is still the Free State's best customer, and accounts for the great proportion of both exports and imports. During the six months' period goods to the value of £11,331,549 were imported, compared with £17,179,674 last year, and exports were £7,246,367, as compared with £12,279,354. Actually, exports have shrunk less than imports, though, proportionately to the volume of trade, they have shrunk more.

Northern Ireland accounts for £1,047,751 in imports and £1,068,985 in exports (as compared with £2,388,957 and £1,591,810 last year), and other countries are £5,241,145 and £443,805, respectively, as compared with £4,782,534 and £454,308 last year. It will be noted that, although the Free State's imports from these countries have increased, the export trade with them has not improved, but has rather declined.

Apart from Great Britain, the Free State's best customer appears to be Belgium, which took £68,639 worth of Free State produce during the last six months, in return for £418,707 worth of goods imported from her. In the case of British India and a few of the other Colonies, the exports exceed the imports, but this is not the case for any other country except Switzerland, which took £29,852 worth of exports and sent us £25,419 worth of imports. Import and export figures for some of the principal countries are as follows:—

Australia, £735,691 and £5,227; Canada, £478,942 and £9,787; British India, £2,996 and £23,893; Argentina, £514,139 and £8,247; Czechoslovakia, £228,470 and £97; Germany, £859,606 and £38,346; Netherlands, £212,384 and £21,005, and U.S.A. £572,158 and £62,474.

During the six months the export trade has increased between the Free State and Australia, British India, South Africa, Belgium, Germany, Italy, and the United States.

The import figures for the various groups are as follows, the corresponding figures for the first six months of last year being given in parentheses:—

Cattle, horses and other live animals, £253,088 (£612,037); food, drink and tobacco, £5,219,455 (£8,699,359); other raw materials and manufactured goods, £12,001,112 (£14,736,755).

In the food, drink and tobacco section the outstanding features are the decline in imports of bacon and hams from £402,727 to £3,634, and in butter from £109,151 to £263. All the imports in this section show a considerable decrease. The imports of cereals and feeding stuffs for animals has dropped by almost half—from £4,415,480 to £2,598,340, the only increase being in imports of wheat, which have gone up by £300,000. Fruit and vegetables fell from £722,955 to £655,540, other articles of food from £2,024,520 to £1,425,499, drink from £285,114 to £243,111, and tobacco (manufactured and unmanufactured) from £270,390 to £132,229. Imports of tea have fallen by a quarter of a million pounds worth—from £878,379 to £649,398.

In the third section there is a large decrease in the value of imported coal (£1,434,025 to £1,229,829); iron and steel manufactures have fallen from £851,202 to £707,714; electrical goods and apparatus from £953,355 to £927,510; apparel from £2,238,100 to £1,531,131, and other textiles from £2,045,054 to £1,827,214. The value of imported motor cars has declined by half to £313,965, but there is an increase in the import of motor chassis and accessories. It is significant to note that the import of fertilisers has gone down from £335,085 to £168,937, while seeds for sowing have declined in value from £296,545 to £134,483.

On the export side, as has been stated, there is a considerable drop in the cattle figures, which are as follows for the six months January to June in both cases:—

Cattle:
Fat	1,647,619	1,013,863
Store	2,494,291	1,376,274
Milch cows and springers	488,005	106,025
Calves	344,893	263,052
Total cattle	4,974,808	2,759,214
Sheep and lambs	395,983	163,860
Pigs	679,492	183,756
Horses	947,991	344,608
Poultry	48,569	6,176
Other live animals	108,326	3,441
Total	£7,155,169	£3,461,055

The figures show a slight increase in exports of fresh beef and mutton, a drop in bacon and hams from £375,675 to £256,535, and in fresh pork from £368,595 to £232,900. Butter has fallen from £507,947 to £452,876, eggs from £1,207,949 to £778,505, porter and beer from £1,913,902 to £1,874,995, and whiskey from £50,315 to £33,461. The value of exports in tractors, tractor parts and motor car parts has fallen from £312,597 to £32,567, and of apparel from £49,187 to £16,264. There is a decrease in export of wool (£76,046 to £126,355), and in newspapers (£16,669 to £19,685), while the export of hides had gone up from £105,535 to £113,453.

The total value of re-exports was £373,249, as compared with £362,516 in the first six months of last year.

NEW IRISH AIR SERVICE.

Captain H. J. Hosie, Irish representative of the Midland and Scottish Air Ferries, Ltd., flew to Cork from Dublin yesterday, accompanied by Flight-Leiutenant C. H. A. Colman, Royal Air Force, and Mr. F. C. Duthie, in connection with the air pageant which the company have planned to take place at Ballincollig on August 6th and 7th.

The primary reason for the display is to introduce to the Cork public the company, which will connect Dublin and Liverpool on a quick and economical air service, which, it is hoped, will be commenced early in August. It has been definitely fixed that there will be two services from Cork daily. The journey from Cork to Dublin will occupy 1½ hours, and from there to Liverpool 3½ hours.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

The Agricultural Products (Regulation of Export) Bill, designed to meet the British quota system, was discussed in the Free State Senate yesterday.—(Page 5.)

The exhibits reached a high level of merit at the Show of the County Wexford United Agricultural Society, which was held in Ennicorthy yesterday.—(Page 8.)

The debate on the Land Bill occupied the entire sitting of the Dail yesterday.—(Page 5.)

A mishap to Mr. C. T. P. Ulm's machine when re-fuelling at Portmarnock yesterday has caused a postponement of his Atlantic flight for probably three weeks. Six persons were injured by the collapse of the 'plane's under-carriage.—(Page 7.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. J. H. Thomas said that the Government was prepared to accept Mr. Lemass's offer to withdraw all special duties, provided there was reasonable ground to expect a settlement of the dispute with the Irish Free State. It must be clearly understood, however, that an essential condition of such agreement was the Free State's payment of the money due to Britain and her acknowledgment of her full Treaty obligations.—(Page 7.)

At a plenary session of the World Economic and Monetary Conference, it was decided to adjourn the Conference indefinitely.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD.

General Balbo has decided to leave Newfoundland to-day for Valentia Island, where the local Italian personnel expect the armada to arrive shortly after midnight.—(Page 7.)

SPORTING.

At Powerstown Park yesterday Herod's Fancy won the Donegal Plate, Lovely Herod the Connaught Plate, Lapwing the Foxhunters' Plate, Farraboy the Tipperary Plate, Storm Signal the Kilkenny Plate, and Silver Lock the Clonmel Steeplechase.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL.

London Stock Markets were firmer yesterday. After the dividend declarations, British Rails advanced sharply.—(Page 3.)

Dublin Market was steady. Bank stock rose to 295.—(Page 3.)

Mr. Michael J. Cooke, the new chairman of the National Bank, delivered a striking address at the meeting of the shareholders in Dublin yesterday. He reviewed the banking position, and defined the fields of theory and practice, and paid a high tribute to the solidity of the Irish banks.—(Page 3.)

The Imperial Current.

Yesterday the Prime Minister of England moved the adjournment of the World Economic Conference, and his motion was adopted unanimously by the tired delegates. It has been left to the Bureau, or Managing Committee, to decide when the full body will re-assemble; but we fancy that the last has been heard of the World Economic Conference. If the nations retained any illusions, they have been shattered by the failure of this latest and greatest effort to restore international prosperity by international co-operation. Mr. Macdonald professes to believe that good yet may come from the Conference; President Roosevelt, who, above all other men, was responsible for the breakdown, retains a vague idea that it has helped the nations to a better understanding of one another. Nevertheless, M. Colijn, the eminently practical Chairman of the Economic Commission, crystallised the opinion of most people when he said that the delegates had no reason to congratulate themselves upon the result, and that the Conference's failure not only was highly disappointing, but might be dangerous. Nothing of the slightest value has been accomplished. The sole result is that those countries whose unbending nationalism wrecked the Conference will be confirmed in their doctrine, while those who trusted in the efficacy of international action will have lost their faith. It is only too evident that the nations are prepared to blunder along the road to ruin rather than to make a single concession to their neighbours for the sake of the general good.

Indirectly, however, the failure of the Conference has done one good thing; it has thrown the British Empire upon her own resources. She no longer can hope for help from outside, and must find her salvation in closer economic communion between the member States of the Commonwealth. When the delegates of other nations will have left London in disappointment, the representatives of the Dominions will remain, in order to discuss problems of inter-imperial trade. They will try to clear up some difficulties which have attended the Ottawa agreements, and in all probability they will make an effort to amplify and extend the scope of those agreements. Ottawa has exerted a marked influence already on the Empire's prosperity. A new declaration, signed by representatives of all the Dominions save the Irish Free State, bears tribute to the improvement effected at Ottawa, and urges the further lowering of trade barriers within the Empire. Gradually, too, the idea of a common monetary policy for the whole Commonwealth is being evolved, and everything suggests that Ottawa was merely the first, short stage in the process which eventually will make the Empire an economic, as she is already a spiritual, entity. When the process is complete she need not fear shipwreck; for a unified British Empire could be independent of supplies from any other country.

Does the Free State propose to paddle her boat against this current? For almost a year now she has been made to appreciate the cost of isolation from the Empire. The latest trade returns bear disquieting evidence to her distress. During the last twelve months her total commerce has declined by over £27,000,000. Her exports of live-stock have fallen in a year by more than half, and no new markets have appeared to take the place of the once invaluable British market. Because her rulers decline to face facts—because they will not realise that the only hope for any country lies in co-operation with its neighbours—the Free State is living to-day from hand to mouth. She can postpone bankruptcy only by an unnatural system of export subsidies that bleeds the citizens to no purpose. If she would abandon catchwords, and would cease to place her confidence in doctrines which the world has tried and rejected, there still would be hope of prosperity. The Empire desires her co-operation, and is willing to admit her to the full privileges of membership on the instant when she sees the light. Mr. J. H. Thomas's speech last night shows that England's resolution to obtain what is due to her from the Free State is unshaken. Mr. de Valera's bluff has failed. Will he not see reason before the distress of his country forces him into a peace which will have become profitless?

Fatness and Fitness.

All of us, if we are rational beings, have a willing ear for the voice of medical science, wherever and whenever it may be lifted. This week, however, we listen with an attention so close that the other, and lesser, voices of the world's affairs are shut out. Our ears, as it were, are at the key-hole. With the doctors in conclave among us, we can fancy ourselves almost partners in any great discovery that they may announce. During the present session of the British Medical Association no more comfortable words have been spoken than those of Mr. H. R. C. Rutherford, F.R.C.S.I., in his paper yesterday to the Section of Neurology. In an age of bustle and hurry he has laid stress upon the importance of rest, and to a world always mildly contemptuous of bodily amplitude he has preached the gospel of fatness. The stout man long has needed a defender, and we may rejoice that his vindication has been reserved for the year in which the British doctors meet in the Irish capital. Julius Cæsar—the fact is common knowledge—found that fat men make the best confidants, and that they do not suffer from insomnia. In his researches into the causes of mental disease Mr. Rutherford has discovered that fatness, at least in the earlier periods of life, generally betokens a mind unclouded and serene. His paper, if it does not put an end altogether to the foolish and illogical convention which makes fun of the stout, at least will bring comfort and healing to that admirable fellowship. Like Mr. A. A. Milne's bear, they will be "proud of being short and stout." The wise of both sexes will wish to emulate them, and they will hear no more of this nonsense of "slimming," which Mr. Rutherford so roundly condemns. To have lost a number of pounds by means of violent and undignified exercise, or by unappetising diet, was, until yesterday, a source of pride to the unthinking man and woman. They will vaunt themselves no more; for, in future, their food will not be weighed by ounces, and the pounds will take care of themselves. Celebrities, on their return from holiday, will be flattered to be described as "bronzed and fat," and Mr. Pickwick will be the ideal of manly beauty. The connection between fatness and contentment, indeed, may be found deep in the human consciousness. Teachers of the very young have given expression to it in the sentence "the fat cat sat on the mat," which, for so many of us, was the first English sentence to take shape under our childish pencils. Only by the cultivation of a full, but seemly, habit shall we attain to that state of physical and mental well-being in which we may pass our time in fruitful quietness.

Modern Assyrians.

To-day the Northern frontier of Iraq stages a curious situation. A remnant of Assyrians inhabits the mountains of that region, and recently some thirteen hundred of them decided to seek a less barren harbourage. They crossed the Tigris into French Syrian territory, proposing to settle there; but the French authorities had no welcome for them, and told them to go back to their mountains. When the unfortunate Assyrians tried to return they found their passage barred by an Iraqi force, which informed them that they must surrender their arms before they could re-cross the Tigris. This condition they rejected, pleading that in the Iraqi mountains every man's hand was against them, and that, disarmed, they would be at the mercy of their Kurdish neighbours, with whom they have been in bitter feud for centuries. The British Chargé d'Affaires has failed to obtain a settlement, and the thirteen hundred Assyrians, separated from their wives and children, unable to go forward, and doomed, as they believe, if they go backward unarmed, are sitting hopelessly on the Syrian bank of the Tigris. It is a sad story, and the sadness of it is raised to tragedy by its association with one of the most tremendous names in the records of mankind. This desperate remnant is in direct descent from that mighty Empire of the Assyrians and Babylonians which, in its day, was the splendid and arrogant master of the civilised world. Its grandeur and power, its sacking of cities and enslavement of whole populations, are written across the Books of the Old Testament. Some of its massive buildings and much of its formidable sculpture have defied the corrosion of time. With every new day the spade reveals, in gold ornament and crowded tomb, new proofs of its luxury. Now the tide of life has taken another course. The last bearers of the Assyrian name are huddled, a miserable group of Ishmaels, on the brink of the river which, alone unchanged, girdles the ruins of their ancient Empire.

Doctor's Advice.

A new wireless station has been erected at Ostrohove, near Boulogne, close to the most densely populated shipping route in the world. It will serve only one purpose—to furnish medical advice to the ships that pass up and down the English Channel. The companies were notified two years ago that the station was under construction, and that all vessels which did not carry a doctor would be welcome to avail themselves of its services. It has just handled its first case. A member of the crew of the tramp steamer Amienois, bound from Algiers to Antwerp, was taken seriously ill. The captain sent a wireless message to Ostrohove, giving the sufferer's symptoms in full detail, together with his temperature. Ostrohove's reply came with speed. The doctor who is attached to the station diagnosed the case from the reported symptoms, and prescribed treatment, which proved to be quite successful, in a return message. Now the service is in regular operation, and certainly will be a boon, if repeated requests for aid from travellers who are afflicted with nothing worse than sea-sickness do not fray the tempers of its personnel and impair its efficiency. This, we believe, is the most strikingly novel use to which wireless has been put so far. The invention is responsible for numerous things—standardised speech, strained relations in Central and Eastern Europe, the illumination of lamps from a distance of hundreds of miles, a new race of professional humorists—but the notion of a medical service by wireless marks a fresh stage in its development.

"INSECT BITE DANGERS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In this district we have the following insects which bite us:—the common horse-fly, a long, grey-winged insect; another, rather shorter, with wings more transparent, and broader set, found only near lakes, rivers and bogs; a third, very much larger insect, same shape and colour as last, very rare. Those three varieties attack both horses and humans. We have the common gnat, which stings indoors, chiefly at night; it goes round humming like a hive bee. It is the only biting fly which follows us indoors or bites in the dark. The common blow-fly, or one very much like it, does sometimes bite, but it seems to be only late in summer or harvest that they develop the power to penetrate sound human skin. On the sandy or stony shores of lakes there is a small, slightly-built fly, with rather long legs and feelers, which can give a very painful bite. We call it the sand-fly. There is, of course, the common little midge, and in some places a larger out-of-doors gnat or mosquito, which will bite severely, falling on you in a swarm. There is also a large black midge, almost as large as a house-fly, which gives real trouble only in cold, wet summers and in wet, shady places. A few years ago, when we had a very wet, cold summer, they became a great plague here to both horses and cows, and to people who had to stay for any time in the places infested by them. I saw cows and horses bleeding all over from their bites; especially the teats of the cows suffered.

At this time of year flying ants will often drive haymakers away from their work near mossy banks and woodlands. Of other insects (non-domestic) the almost invisible little red insect, commonly called the harvest bug, in some years makes fruit-picking almost as much as your skin is worth. Some varieties of both land and water beetles can give a sharp nip, and I have been often warned as a child that the common black centipede, which preys on earth-worms, gives a very poisonous sting, but I cannot say that I ever saw it try. There is a small water insect or crustacean—I am not sure which—which is common in weedy lakes. In some lakes they will eat the worms off your fish-hooks if you leave them lying a while on the bottom. A short time ago, as I was swimming, one of those managed to get inside my bathing togs and fastened on my flesh. At first I thought a pin or needle in my togs was pricking me, but the pain soon got so intense that (the water being only breast-high) I got on my feet and started to search for the cause of the trouble, and found one of those insects at work on me. I believe that a weak swimmer, if attacked in the same way in deep water, might lose nerve and drown, as is said to happen from a sting from the jelly fish in sea water. It is possible that some accidents blamed on cramp or heart failure may have been from this cause.—Yours, etc.,

W. J. NASH.

THE FESTIVE SIDE

A FASHIONABLE PARTY.

IN THE PROVOST'S GARDEN.

NEVER was showery weather more unwelcome than yesterday, when some hundreds of guests availed themselves of invitations to the Garden Party given by the Board of Trinity College, Dublin, in the Provost's and Fellows' Garden. The party followed the conferring of honorary degrees.

The entertainment had been planned on a lavish scale. In a large marquee were refreshments of every kind, in addition to an orchestra—"The Society of Players"—who performed pleasing musical items throughout the afternoon.

Heavy showers of rain compelled visitors to shelter in the marquee during the tea hour, but afterwards the clouds broke away and the sun shone out, and so enabled strangers to view the University buildings and the Provost's house, which were thrown open for the occasion. The lawns presented a gay appearance. Academic dress was the attire for men, and robes of vivid scarlet vied with shades of yellow and green, to make the scene a colourful one.

THE DRESSES.

Owing to the showery afternoon the toilettes of the ladies were rather subdued.

The Countess of Iveagh wore a graceful navy blue and white-patterned crepe-de-Chine frock, with a navy blue tagal hat, trimmed with a wreath of pink roses, and a short eye-veil. She was accompanied by the Earl of Iveagh, Chancellor of Dublin University, in his robes of office. The Provost of Trinity College was present with Mrs. Gwynn, who chose a small biscuit-coloured hat to wear with her brown floral frock and biscuit marocain coat. Miss Gwynn was in a small white hat and a diagonal striped frock, worn under a pale green coat. The Junior Dean (Dr. Kenneth Bailey) brought Mrs. K. Bailey, who wore a pale grey toilette and a small grey hat. Mrs. Luce, wearing a white sailor hat with her blue suit, was accompanied by Dr. A. A. Luce, F.T.C.D. Dr. J. Brontë Gatenby came with Mrs. Gatenby, who wore a small black felt toque with a black and white striped silk frock and black coat. Mrs. Morland was wearing a black hat with a green floral frock. A brown ensemble was worn by Mrs. W. Pearson.

Mrs. R. Russell wore a pale grey ensemble and black feather boa with a black lace straw hat. She was accompanied by Mr. R. Russell, S.F.T.C.D. Colonel Fitzsimons came with Mrs. Fitzsimons, who wore a large white straw hat with a smart blue and white georgette frock. Mrs. W. Haughton was in brown and beige lace, and a large brown picture hat. A striking frock of scarlet crêpe was worn by Mrs. Hoffmeyer (Cape Town), with a tagel hat in the same shade. Mrs. Wicht was attractively dressed in a mushroom pink and black check silk two-piece, with a hat to match, and fox furs, while Mrs. Gill chose a brown ensemble and Mrs. R. Elliott a smart black georgette frock trimmed with white fox fur, and a black corded silk and straw hat. Mrs. Hugh Kennedy wore a red banku hat with a dress of navy and red check poplin. Mrs. C. W. Murphy's red hat was worn with a navy blue coat.

Mrs Crozier was in a black crêpe frock, with a red and white-edged cape and a small white hat. Dr. M. Gregg wore a stocking-top cap with her rose-coloured Irish tweed dress. Miss B. Gregg was attired in pale grey. Mrs. Boxwell wore a black hat with a black frock and fox furs. The Dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral was accompanied by Miss Harvey, who wore a white hat with her lime-green frock. Dr. T. O. Graham brought Mrs. Graham, wearing a smart brown and white striped silk frock, with a brown straw toque. Mrs. Steen, wearing a navy blue and orange silk frock and navy hat, came with Miss Steen, who chose a black hat to wear with a lime green marocain frock. Lady Taylor wore black, and Mrs. Ridlington a black and white satin two-piece, with a small white hat. A black hat was worn by Mrs. F. Ryan, with a smart black and red two-piece. Mrs. Henry chose a beige toilette. Mrs. Scott was in brown and beige, with a brown hat, and Mrs. Brittain wore a pale pink crinoline hat, with a pale grey ensemble.

A small black straw hat was worn by Mrs. Henry Dixon, with a black and grey floral silk frock. Mrs. Loughridge was attired in a pink floral chiffon frock and black hat, and Mrs. Ganley wore a black coat, with a smart pink hat. Dr. Pillmann Williams chose a black floral frock, with a black hat. Dr. Dorothy Hare was also attired in black. Lady O'Loghlen wore a wide black picture hat, with a black marocain frock. Mrs Horner was in green and white patterned crêpe-de-chine, with a green straw hat. Mrs. Bradley's frock was of navy blue marocain and beige lace, and she wore a navy hat. Dr. Lilian Davy wore a black hat underlined with white, with a black suit. Sir Arthur Ball brought Lady Ball, who wore a navy blue coat, trimmed with summer fox fur, and a small brown and green hat. Mrs. McKnight was smart in a blue and white floral silk frock, with a beige hat and coat, and Miss Burke chose a white hat to wear with a crushed strawberry two-piece.

Also present were:—The Vice-Chancellor (Sir Thomas Molony), the President of the British Medical Association (Sir William Smyly), the Rev. R. M. Gwynn, F.T.C.D.; Dr. Goligher, F.T.C.D.; Mr. W. Kennedy, S.F.T.C.D.; the Rev. Dr. Roberts, Vice-Provost; Professor N. F. Dixon and Mrs. Dixon, Miss Dixon, Dr. Thomby, Professor J. T. Wigham, Dr. Donaldson, Mr. J. Maxwell Henry, Mr. Joseph Johnston, F.T.C.D.; Major Walker (Malta), Dr. J. Joly, F.T.C.D.; Dr. A. J. McConnell, F.T.C.D.; Dr. and Mrs. McFeteridge, Professor A. H. Davidson, Dr. Arthur Finnegan, Mr. Lawrence Finnegan, Dr. C. F. T. Scott, Mr. J. Collins, Dr. F. Gill, Mr. Cholmondley Clarke, Miss Synolda Clarke, Mr. Dermot Malcolmson, Mrs. Wilmer, Dr. N. Falkiner, Miss Overend, Dr. E. Steen, Captain H. Brew Kennedy, M.C.; Professor H. H. Dixon, Dr. H. de Burgh Daly, Miss Daly, Dr. and Mrs. J. Beckett, Dr. Corbett, Mr. George Mitchell, Mrs. Heath, Dr. and Mrs. Peacocke, Dr. Drury, Miss Drury, Dr. and Mrs. Meldon, Mr. F. Ryan, Dr. Watson, Mr. Ogilvie, Squadron-Leader R. A. G. Elliott and Mrs. Elliott, Dr. L. Parsons, Dr. Boxwell, Mr. C. W. Murphy, Dr. G. Dockeray, and Miss Thompson.

LUNCHEON AT TEACH ULTAN.

The women doctors attending the Congress were entertained to lunch yesterday by the Medical Board of Teach Ultan. Fifty-six guests were present.

After lunch the guests were shown over the hospital by the staff, and were very much impressed by the hospital's equipment—with every modern invention for the curing of children's ailments.

VISIT TO NEWCASTLE SANATORIUM.

A large party of delegates was entertained at Newcastle Sanatorium yesterday afternoon. They were shown over the sanatorium and afterwards entertained to tea by the Board of Governors and the Matron. They expressed themselves as being much impressed with the sanatorium, and very appreciative of the hospitality of the Governors. About forty-seven of the members were present. They were shown over the hospital by the resident doctors. The modern equipment of the hospital specially interested them.

LUNCHEON AT MESSRS. GUINNESS'S.

A large party of the British Medical Association delegates was entertained to lunch at Messrs. Guinness's Brewery by Lord and Lady Iveagh yesterday. They spent a very enjoyable few hours, and greatly appreciated Lord Iveagh's hospitality.

Those present included:—The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, Professor and Mrs. T. G. Moorhead, Senator and Mrs. Parniville, Dr. and Mrs E. K. Le Fleming, Dr. and Mrs. Shanley, Professor and Mrs Dean Lewis (U.S.A.), Sir Robert Woods, Mr. N. Bishop Harman, Professor Emil Novak (U.S.A.), Sir James and Lady Barr, Sir W. H. Porter and Sir Robert Bolam.

MESSRS. WILLS.

A party of about a hundred delegates visited Messrs. Wills's Tobacco Factory yesterday afternoon. They were shown over the factory, and remained about an hour and a half there. They were much interested in the different types of machinery necessary to produce one good cigarette.

LONDON LETTER.

THE CONFERENCE ENDS.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

The keynote of the earlier speeches on the last day of the World Economic Conference was disappointing. Mr. Neville Chamberlain remarked: "There is no need to disguise the fact that we are greatly disappointed to have to record that so little progress has been made towards our goal," while Dr. Colijn, the Chairman of the Economic Commission, was almost devastating in his expressions concerning the lack of results. This lack he described as "highly disappointing and dangerous as well, because, after what has happened at this Conference, the world may well be faced by an aggravation of the situation, and that situation may easily go from bad to worse." Dr. Colijn is a strenuous upholder of the gold group of the Conference, and the stern insistence of these countries on the gold standard really has been one of the primary causes of failure.

Failure.

There was much discussion in the lobbies of the Conference to-day, and it was noted that members of delegations were saying "Good-bye" rather, than "Au revoir." Manifestly few believe that the Conference will reassemble in anything like its present condition. It will be impossible, they assert, to bring together heads of Governments and such important statesmen as have appeared at the present gathering. Though the Conference may be called together some time or other, any resumption is likely to be only a ghost of the former gathering. I was reminded to-day that, when the Conference opened, people said that it would be unable to come to any really important decisions, owing to the conflicting interests of so many countries. To-day the Conference faded out, and few of its resolutions are likely to outlive the year.

Mr. Lloyd George.

The intervention of Mr. Lloyd George in last night's debate was much discussed in political circles to-day, and there were suggestions that he might be contemplating adhesion to the little party led by Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Lloyd. This was characterised as absurd by one of Mr. Lloyd George's friends, though it is admitted that the three politicians are now on terms of considerable friendship. Mr. Lloyd George, by his reference to the White Paper policy, made an advance towards a removal of the differences between himself and the others, and it was not surprising that this should lead to rumours of an understanding. Mr. Churchill, no doubt, would welcome any support given to him by Mr. Lloyd George in his struggle against the White Paper, but it is doubtful whether that support will be forthcoming. Mr. Lloyd George, for the moment, prefers to work by himself.

Slum Clearance.

In the course of the next few days a report dealing with the Government slum clearance plans will be issued, suggesting methods in which the public utility companies, such as building societies, may help to provide houses without expense to the State. The Government's plans are expected to approach completion at the end of September, and by that time all the plans of the local authorities will have been received. If circumstances favour such a course, it is hoped to get to work immediately. The plan is to move half a million families into better homes during five years. A housing corporation will be promoted, which will get to work in all the great centres, and will co-ordinate the work of the agencies that are engaged in slum-clearing and re-housing.

The Lane Pictures.

There is a general opinion that the British Government, when once it has the book of beautiful illustrations of the new Municipal Gallery of Modern Art in Dublin, will have small excuse for refusing to permit the Lane pictures to go to the magnificent home prepared for them. It is now thirty years since Sir Hugh Lane initiated the movement which has reached its climax in this fine building, with its more than adequate accommodation for the Lane collection. In his preface Mr. J. J. Reynolds points out that the Corporation of Dublin has honourably discharged its part of the compact entered into with the late Sir Hugh Lane; and this fact ought to have some weight with the Government here when it can find time to review the question.

Ireland on the Screen.

Some indication of the growing interest which is being taken in the Irish Free State not only as a tourist resort, but also from the general point of view, may be seen in the desire of different organisations to film the country. On Thursday morning Mr Herbert, of the Fox Movietone News, New York, landed at the North Wall. Mr. Herbert, accompanied by his wife and assistant, Mr. Bills, has been sent out by his company to put the world on the screen. His pictures, which are being shown throughout America and Great Britain, under the title of "The Magic Carpet," have attained high levels in "interest film" work. Mr. Herbert's presence in Ireland to "shoot" the country is due to the Free State High Commissioner, Mr. Dulanty. Mr. Herbert had come to Britain from the Continent, and was experiencing many disappointments in England, when he met Mr. Dulanty, who suggested that in Ireland there was almost a virgin field for the camera man. His interest was strongly aroused, and the energetic co-operation of the Free State Department of External Affairs, the Department of Lands and Fisheries, and the Irish Tourist Association, was obtained.

Tourist Propaganda.

The Hamburg-Amerika Line has appointed one of its most expert camera men to visit Southern Ireland in September to take a 10,000-foot film. This particular film is required for the series of lectures which the steamship line is arranging throughout the U.S.A. It will be a much more detailed study than that which is being prepared for the Fox Movietone News, and ought to be an extremely good propaganda medium for Ireland in the United States. The High Commissioner's office has arranged the matter with the London representative of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, and again the willing co-operation of the two Free State departments and the Irish Tourist Association and other organisations interested is assured.

The Gran Chaco Dispute.

A recent meeting of the League of Nations at Geneva made arrangements for the despatch of a Commission to restore peace between Bolivia and Paraguay in the dispute over the Gran Chaco, but it is improbable now that the Commission will be called upon to act. Paraguay has requested the League to issue a mandate for the restoration of peace with Bolivia to the Governments of the Argentine, Brazil, Chile and Peru, and the Bolivian Government has expressed its agreement with this course. If the four Governments mentioned are willing to undertake the duty, there will be no need for the despatch of the League Commission.

DUBLIN SOLICITOR'S ESTATE.

Mr. William Vernon Seddall, of 70 Merrion road, Ballsbridge, solicitor, who died on the 19th February last, son of the Rev. Mr. Seddall, left personal estate in England and the Irish Free State valued at £6,003 6s. 9d.

PORTMARNOCK FLIGHT DELAYED.

SIX INJURED BY COLLAPSE OF 'PLANE'S UNDERCARRIAGE.

FREE STATE AIR FORCE UNDERTAKES REPAIRS.

ITALIANS EXPECTED AT VALENTIA SOON AFTER MIDNIGHT.

THE aeroplane Faith in Australia, which, it was confidently expected, would have been by now well on its way to America, lay last night on the strand at Portmarnock, partially dismantled and shored up on oil drums, with the incoming tide lapping around them. By midnight the machine had been removed above high-water line, and a military guard was keeping watch over it.

The refuelling of the 'plane ready for its Atlantic flight was nearing completion yesterday morning when the mishap occurred.

In the process of hauling the machine on to planks the left wheel of the under-carriage sank into the sand, the axle snapped, and the aeroplane toppled over on to its left side, pinning down six persons who were assisting. Three of them received rather serious injuries and were rushed to hospital.

The repairing of the damage may delay the start of the flight for some three weeks, but Flight-Lieutenant C. T. P. Ulm and his three companions are to remain in Dublin until the 'plane is again ready, when another start will be made from Portmarnock.

With the arrival yesterday at Shoal Harbour, Newfoundland, of the twenty-fourth 'plane of the Italian air armada, General Balbo is all ready for the next stage of his flight home to Italy. He leaves to-day for Valentia Island, the longest hop so far of the tour —1,800 miles.

The armada has hitherto averaged 125 m.p.h., so the ocean passage should occupy about fourteen-and-a-half hours.

The time of departure has not yet been officially disclosed, but our Special Representative at Valentia telegraphed last night that officials on the island anticipate that the armada will arrive in the darkness, probably about one o'clock to-morrow morning. This would be their first landing by night, and it will be accomplished in the light of flares, the searchlight of the fishery cruiser Muirchu, and special flood-lighting apparatus which is being rushed from Dublin.

THREE WEEKS TO REPAIR DAMAGE.

The Faith in Australia, an Avro 10 monoplane, capable of a flying speed of over 200 miles per hour, arrived at Baldonnel Aerodrome from Heston airport at 7.20 a.m. yesterday with Flight-Lieutenant Ulm; his companions from Australia, Captain P. G. Taylor and Mr. G. L. Allen, and the wireless operator, Mr. J. A. W. Edwards; and a passenger, Mr. Maidment, of the Wright Aeromotor Co.

Although a lorry containing petrol supplies was available at the aerodrome, Mr. Ulm decided to conduct his re-fuelling operations on the strand at Portmarnock, and after breakfasting in the officers' mess as guest of Major-General Hugo M'Neill, Chief of Staff, he took off again for Portmarnock at 8.15.

Upon arrival a party of Civic Guards, under Superintendent Walsh, and a force of military drew a cordon around the machine, and the work of filling its tanks with eleven hundred gallons of petrol was begun.

AXLE SNAPS.

It was shortly after eleven o'clock that the accident occurred which resulted in the temporary abandonment of the flight and probably delay of at least three weeks.

At that hour nearly a thousand gallons were in the tanks, and Flight-Lieutenant Ulm and Captain Taylor were half a mile down the strand in a motor car examining the runway, the conditions having been judged as particularly suitable for an immediate start of the flight.

In their absence it was decided to haul the machine on to planks to facilitate the take-off. While this was being done, with the assistance of Civic Guards and volunteers from the watching crowds, the left wheel slipped into the sand, the axle of the under-carriage snapped, and the aeroplane fell over on to its left side, six people being injured by the falling wing.

Of these, three men sustained rather serious injuries, and were taken in the Baldonnel ambulance to the Mater Misericordiæ Hospital. They were: Mr. George Corbett, Seamount House, Howth; Mr. Sterling Tomlinson, Malahide, and Mr. Leo Hands, 12 Carrick terrace, Rialto. Mr. Tomlinson was subsequently transferred to the Adelaide Hospital.

Captain Saul, who flew the Atlantic in the Southern Cross with Sir Charles Kingsford Smith, and who was present to give Mr. Ulm the benefit of his knowledge of trans-Atlantic weather and atmospheric conditions, was in the cabin of the machine when the accident occurred.

NO STRUCTURAL DEFECT.

Major-General Hugo McNeill said to an Irish Times representative: "The mishap was not due to any structural fault, but to the sinking of the left wheel of the under-carriage into the sand and the consequent placing upon it of undue strain during the operation of shifting the 'plane's position. The machine will have to be dismantled and transferred to Baldonnel, where repairs can be effected."

He added that the machine would not be damaged by the rising tide, as it was only a foot in depth at this part of the strand at the present time of the year. It would be impossible to begin the task of dismantling the machine until evening, and it would not be completed before nightfall. A military guard would be placed over it during the night.

Flight-Lieutenant Ulm, who was naturally keenly disappointed, said: "It is particularly unfortunate since weather conditions for the flight to-day were excellent. I shall remain in Dublin with my companions until the 'plane is repaired, and then we will make another start from Portmarnock."

When the nine hundred gallons of petrol had been permitted to flow away to lighten the 'plane, it was jacked up on empty oil drums, and the work of taking it to pieces was begun later by a dismantling squad from Baldonnel.

CONDITION OF INJURED.

Mr. Sterling Tomlinson, who is at the Adelaide Hospital, is suffering from injuries to the back, and was X-rayed yesterday. His condition is being carefully watched.

Mr. Leo Hands, who is at the Mater Hospital, also received injuries to the back, but he passed a good night.

The youth George Corbett, also at the Mater, received extensive scalp wounds, but he had a good night and showed no symptoms of other trouble.

FLOODLIGHTS FOR THE ARMADA.

PREPARATIONS FOR A NIGHT LANDING.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

VALENTIA, Thursday.

Weather conditions over the Atlantic to-morrow are likely to be suitable for the passage of the Italian air armada, I was told to-night.

It is anticipated that the twenty-four flying-boats will arrive here in the darkness, probably about one a.m. on Saturday, and provision is being made to light the landing area in the channel between the island and the mainland.

Flood-lighting equipment is being brought from Dublin immediately, and the Free State Army Air Corps will also bring their powerful mobile flood-light from Baldonnel to supplement the flares already at the island. The fisheries cruiser Muirchu, which arrived to-day, is fitted with a powerful searchlight, and it will also be used to facilitate the landing of the flying-boats.

KILLARNEY MEETING WITH MR. DE VALERA?

A dump of thirty thousand gallons of petrol has been established here in preparation for the refuelling of the flying-boats. Most of this petrol has already been loaded into launches and rowing boats in readiness for the armada's arrival.

The journey from Valentia to Orbetello airport is to be made in one hop, and it is for this reason that such a large quantity has been transported to the island.

Efforts are being made to arrange a visit to Killarney for General Balbo, and he may meet Mr. de Valera there, as it is believed that the airmen will not stay here long enough for the General to make an official visit to Dublin.

FROM "THE TIMES."

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

THE NEXT STEP.

The Times to-day, in a leading article on the adjournment for an indefinite period of the World Economic Conference, says:—Of the British Government in particular it will be expected that they will be tireless in their efforts to reconcile the differences which at present make anything like a world agreement impossible. Still more, it will be expected that their disappointment in the international field will make them redouble their efforts to restore prosperity at home by bold and constructive action, and to confirm and extend that prosperity by seeking the closest co-operation with the other countries of the Empire, and with those countries outside the Empire whose economic interests are closely linked with ours, and whose currencies, like our own, are tied neither to gold nor to the dollar. A basis for such co-operation has now been provided in the important joint declaration issued yesterday by the delegations of Great Britain, the Dominions and India.

The declaration emphasises the importance of stability of exchange rates between the countries of the Empire, the achievement of which will be aided by the pursuit of a common policy of raising price levels, and is facilitated by the fact that the United Kingdom Government has no commitments to other countries as regards the future management of sterling. It adds, very significantly, that the adherence of other countries to a policy on similar lines would make possible the attainment and maintenance of exchange stability over a still wider area. If this invitation meets with the response which may reasonably be expected, it may prove by far the most important outcome of the World Conference.

NATIONAL GUARD PARADE.

INVITATIONS ISSUED TO MINISTERS.

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

All the Ministers of the Free State Government, as well as members of the Senate and Dail, have received invitations from General O'Duffy, on behalf of the National Guard, to be present at the Collins-Griffith-O'Higgins anniversary celebration at Merrion street, Dublin, on Sunday, August 13th.

The invitation states that places will be reserved for all public representatives on the occasion. After the proceedings at the Cenotaph in Merrion street there will be a procession to the graves in Glasnevin Cemetery.

It is understood that application has been made to the proper quarter for permission to hold the ceremony at the Cenotaph.

UNIVERSITY OF DUBLIN.

DISTINGUISHED MEN HONOURED.

HONORARY DEGREES CONFERRED.

THE Senate of Dublin University met in the Theatre of Trinity College yesterday at 3.30 o'clock p.m. for the purpose of conferring certain honorary degrees in connection with the visit of the British Medical Association to Dublin.

The Caput consisted of the Chancellor (the Right Hon. the Earl of Iveagh, C.B., C.M.G.), the Provost, and the Senior Master Non-Regent (the Rev. R. M. Gwynn, F.,T.C.D.).

The members of the Senate present included:—The Right Hon. Sir T. F. Molony, Bart., LL.D. (Vice-Chancellor); the Rev. W. R. W. Roberts, S.F.,T.C.D. (Vice-Provost); R. Russell, S.F.,T.C.D. (Bursar); M. W. J. Fry, S.F.,T.C.D. (Senior Lecturer); W. Kennedy, F.,T.C.D. (Senior Proctor); Dr. W. A. Goligher, F.,T.C.D. (Registrar); Sir Robert Tate, F.,T.C.D. (Public Orator); Dr. E. H. Alton, F.,T.C.D.; Rev. Dr. A. A. Luce, F.,T.C.D.; Dr. A. J. McConnell, F.,T.C.D.; Dr. K. C. Bailey, F.,T.C.D. (Junior Dean); J. M. Henry, F.,T.C.D.; Regius Professors Rev. N. J. D. White, T. Gillman Moorehead (President of the British Medical Association), and Sir Arthur Ball, Bart.; Professors A. F. Dixon, H. H. Dixon, J. W. Bigger (Secretary of the Dublin meeting of the British Medical Association); J. T. Wigham, E. A. Werner, E. C. Rowlette, Canon G. V. Jourdan, and H. Pringle. Also Dr. E. J. M. Watson, Dr. J. Bell, Dr. Ella Webb, Sir John W. Moore, Edwin Solomons, M.A.; Dr. A. Denne Bolton, J. H. Shaw, M.A. (Assistant Registrar); Dr. G. H. P. Hewson (University Organist), William Moore, M.A.; Major G. L. Allen, M.A. (Registrar of the Medical School); C. B. Kennedy, M.A. (Accountant); A. C. Williams, M.A.

There were also present:—Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Anderson, Professor Barry, Dr. Dorothy Bennett, Professor Beattie, Mrs. Bigger, Sir R. Bolam, Professor and Mrs. Burgess, Sir Henry Brackenbury, Mrs. Fry and Miss I. Fry, Mrs. Gwynn, Mrs. R. M. Gwynn, Mrs. Gordon Holmes, Dr. C. O. Hawthorne, Lady Iveagh, Mrs. Bishop Harman, Dr. Graham Hodson, Dr. and Mrs. Harrison Orton, Mrs. Le Fleming, Dr. Philip Lee, Mrs. Moorhead, Dr. Egbert Moreland, Professor Milroy, Professor and Mrs. H. F. Moore, Sir Ewen Maclean, Dr. MacErlean, Mrs. Novak, Dr. Prendergast, Mrs. Russell, Sir Humphry Rolleston, Mr. Ferris-Scott, Dr. J. P. Shanley and Miss Margaret Dixon.

The recipients of honorary degrees were introduced by the Public Orator in Latin speeches, which are summarised as follows:—

SC.D.

GORDON MORGAN HOLMES, C.M.G., C.B.E., F.R.S.

Dr. Gordon Morgan Holmes, described by the Public Orator as a man of extraordinary ability, learning and industry, vir excellenti ingenio, scientia, industria clarus, is one of the most distinguished living graduates of the University of Dublin, a Fellow of the Royal Society, and a neurologist of European fame: cuius fama non huius insulae finibus continetur sed Europae vel ultimos recessus iam pridem occupavit. After a course of great brilliance he left Trinity with a Medical Travelling Prize and pursued his studies at Berlin and Frankfurt-am-Main, returning thence to London, where he now occupies the post of physician to more than one important hospital. His invaluable war service as consulting neurologist to the British armies in France won for him the C.M.G. in 1917 and in 1919 the C.B.E., while his skill in the diagnosis and treatment of all diseases of the brain and nervous system may fairly be described as unrivalled: cerebri et nervorum affectiones ut nemo dignoscere et sanare callet. The Public Orator called upon his audience to express by their applause their appreciation of the work of Dr. Gordon Holmes.

SC.D.

EMIL NOVAK.

Dr. Emil Novak, of Baltimore, is an eminent American gynæcologist. He is in his branch of the profession an Associate of the Medical School of Johns Hopkins University, and is a Fellow and past Vice-President of the Gynæcological Society of his own country. His researches have been extensive and profound: arte sua praeter ceteros eruditus: and the secret chosen by the Preacher to typify that which none may understand is for him a matter of mere everyday knowledge. His published writings are too numerous to be cited in detail, and too abstruse to be described in Latin with any chance of success: nomina dissertationum pluimarum recensere supersedeo, ne res tam subtiles in linguam Latinam conversas deformem. Special mention may, however, be made of his articles on the Physiology and Pathology of the Endometrium and on Adenocarcinoma of the Uterus, besides his sections on Physiology, Endocrinology, and Pathology in Curtis' Archives of Gynæcology. The Public Orator commended Dr. Novak to the University of Dublin as a man of learning and distinction, to whom the highest honours and applause are due: virum acclamationis vestrae fervidae honore cumulatissime augendum.

M.D.

ERNEST KAYE LE FLEMING.

When presenting Dr. Ernest Kaye Le Fleming, who is in general practice at Wimborne, Dorset, the Public Orator remarked that he very rarely had the privilege of introducing to the University one of that splendid body of men who prefer such practice to specialisation: e viris primariis unum qui sibi nullam certam medicinae partem asserunt sed artis beneficentissimae peritia ampliore quodam modo uti volunt. Dr. Le Fleming was educated at Cambridge and St. George's Hospital. He is Chairman of the Representative Body of the British Medical Association, is direct elected representative of the profession on the General Medical Council, and has published amongst various medical papers a most valuable discussion of the general practitioner's relation to the profession, the State and the public. He has been a member of his Urban District Council for many years, is local Secretary for Dorset of the Society of Antiquaries, and has written much on the history of that county. In short, as he is a stranger to no human interest, so we must no longer permit him to be a stranger to us: qui humani nihil a se alienum putat, eum a coetu nostro alienum esse vetamus.

M.D.

HENRY SESSIONS SOUTTAR, C.B.E.

Dr. Henry Sessions Souttar, Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, was formerly a Mathematical Scholar of Queen's College, Oxford, and gained double First Class Honours in the school of Mathematics in that University: cum tota mente in disciplinam mathematicam incubuisset, in prima classe bis renuntiatus honores summos Oroniae reportavit. He afterwards obtained a Scholarship at the London Hospital, to which he is now surgeon. During the Great War he was surgeon-in-chief of the Belgian field-hospital at Antwerp, and subsequently senior surgeon to the British Red Cross hospital at Netley. For these services he was in 1917 created Officier de l'Ordre de la Couronne de Belgique, and received the C.B.E. in 1919. Of his many publications perhaps the chief are "The Art of Surgery," "Radium and its Surgical Applications," "Injuries of the Peripheral Nerves," "The Operative Treatment of Difficult Hernias," and his article on "The Mouth, Lips and Œsophagus" in the "Medical Encyclopædia." Dr. Souttar is universally acknowledged," said the Public Orator, "to be an eminently worthy recipient of our Honorary Degree": vir omnium consensu dignus qui titulo nostro ornetur.

THE ECONOMIC DISPUTE.

THE BRITISH ATTITUDE.

CONDITIONS OF SETTLEMENT.

MR. THOMAS'S FIRM STATEMENT.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.

WESTMINSTER, Thursday.

ON the motion for the third reading of the Appropriation Bill, the Commons to-day discussed Dominion affairs, and Mr. J. H. Thomas (Dominions Secretary) stated the Government's attitude towards a settlement of the dispute with the Irish Free State.

The debate was initiated by Mr. Lunn (Labour), who said that the Ottawa agreements would be disastrous to the best interests of Great Britain.

As to the dispute with the Irish Free State, Mr. Lunn said that he had never hesitated to state his belief in the justice of the British case, and that the land annuities should be paid. But he held that when the offer of arbitration was made it should have been accepted. There were as good men outside the Empire as there were in the Empire, although he had never met an impartial chairman, and he had had some experience in industrial matters. There were now rumours of a settlement, and he asked was there anything in those rumours? Was the Government going to take advantage of the gesture made by the Dail?

Sir Archibald Sinclair, referring to the dispute with the Irish Free State, said that it should be remembered that a great and wealthy nation was dealing with a small and poor, but proud, people, and the more convinced they were of the justice of their case the more they should be willing to stretch to the utmost the possibility of finding a basis on which Mr. de Valera could meet them.

Mr. Vyvyan Adams (Conservative) asked the Dominions Secretary to take care we did not run into another shocking blunder as before in dealing with Ireland. Mr. de Valera was certainly honest, even though he might be a fanatic. He had behind him almost as absolute a majority as the National Government had behind them here. If our case on the annuities was so cast-iron, then we should not be afraid of taking it before any tribunal. He asked that we should be generous to Ireland, as only the strong could be generous.

An Hon. Member—At the expense of the British taxpayer?

Mr. Adams—We should give them the extra-imperial tribunal.

A REMINDER.

Colonel Gretton (Conservative) said that there were some, like the hon. member who had just spoken, who assumed that the fault was always on the British side; but these annuities were a matter of treaty and agreement. Enormous concessions were made to the Irish people when their Government was set up. There was some obligation on their side to carry out the agreement entered into. At present the Administration in Ireland was not friendly to this country, but was openly hostile. We would not improve the situation by a policy of surrender.

The position of the British Government in regard to annuities had been in the interest of this country, and it would be imposing an unjust burden on British taxpayers if we were to change that attitude and surrender.

Major Ross (Conservative, Londonderry) complained that no serious attempt was being made to cope with the counter-measures adopted by the Irish Free State, such as the raising of the bounty on Irish butter.

Mr. D. Grenfell (Labour) said that the policy of the Government with regard to the Irish Free State was a stupid and a futile policy. As a result of it we sent a million tons less coal to the Irish Free State during the year, and 4,000 miners had lost their employment. He did not blame the Dominions Secretary altogether, as there were faults on both sides, but there was no room for delay in the settlement of this difficulty.

MR. THOMAS'S REPLY.

Mr. J. H. Thomas, in the course of his reply, said that since Ottawa inter-Imperial trade had increased. More trade had come to this country and had gone from this country to other parts of the Empire. That was the best justification of Ottawa.

Everyone deplored the continuance of the dispute with the Irish Free State Government and would hope that it might be ended. Roughly 94 per cent. of the exported produce of the Free State came to this country, and nearly seventy per cent of the Free State's imports came from this country. Under such circumstances it was madness to continue quarrelling.

He had been asked if he could make some gesture. It was not true that he had neglected any opportunity. No offer of any sort had been made to this country, except the official offer made during the negotiations between Mr. de Valera and the British Government. He noticed, however, that on Wednesday evening Mr. Lemass, during a discussion in the Free State Senate on the question of making the emergency duties permanent, said that the Free State Government were prepared to raise the emergency duties immediately if the British Government would do likewise.

If, said Mr. Thomas, the statement made by Mr. Lemass was intended to open the door, then I accept it on behalf of the Government. If it means that the duties will be remitted by Ireland and by us, and that we will resort to the status quo—that is, that the Treaty obligations will be fulfilled and the money paid—then there is no difficulty whatever.

We will discontinue the duties, all of them, immediately we see a reasonable chance of a settlement by the Irish Free State representatives, indicating that they realise and recognise the position.

It is only fair that I should emphasise that, in view of the rumours which are about, any overtures of any sort or kind made on behalf of the Irish Free State will not only not be rejected, but will be accepted sympathetically by us.

I am genuinely and sincerely anxious for peace, because I believe peace ought to exist between both nations, and I repeat, on behalf of the British Government, that we will lose no chance to effect an honourable settlement.

ARMAGH MILL RE-OPENED.

Drumcairne Spinning Mill, Armagh, which has been closed since July 10, 1930, re-opened yesterday. The mill was purchased in September last by Messrs. Hale Martin, Dungannon, Ballinamore, and Ballymoney, from Mr. J. Wilson, late of Hockley, Richhill. Mr. T. Boyd, the former manager, has taken over management of the mill.

It is estimated that about twenty hands will be employed on Monday, but this number will be gradually increased as the work progresses. Prior to the cessation of work, three years ago, about 480 people were employed.

REFERENCES IN THE DAIL.

LAND ANNUITY ARREARS.

MR. COSGRAVE CONGRATULATED.

BY OUR SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE.

ONE of the minor consequences of the dispute with Britain is that deputies of the discursive kind have now a new war to discuss.

There was a time—and not so long ago —when the echoes of the civil war crept ever and anon into the deliberations of the Dail, distracting deputies from the subject at issue and leading them on new lines of thought. Now those echoes have been silenced, swallowed up in the nearer, and therefore louder, reverberations of the economic war.

Nobody can deny that Mr. Aiken, when (to vary the figure) he introduced this red-herring into yesterday's debate on the committee stage of the Land Bill, was given adequate warning that the trail would be followed by Opposition deputies, who had themselves been prevented from laying the scent. First Mr. MacDermot drew attention to the wide field which would be opened up anew by the very contentious statements that the Minister, without any apparent relevancy, was making, and then Mr. Aiken was admonished in Mr. Dillon's most paternal style that "if he is going to talk about the economic war, I shall answer him at great length."

"THIS PARTICULAR ECONOMIC WAR."

Much to the gratification of the bellicose Mr. Belton, however, the Minister maintained his course. The merits of lawyers, as compared to their costs, which had previously been the most-discussed topic under this bill, were temporarily forgotten, and attention was concentrated on the economic war, Mr. Aiken, for some reason, was more specific than this in his appellation—"this particular economic war," he called it, and "the one that started on July 15th last year"—just as though economic wars had been a recurrent phenomenon of Free State history.

The House at the time was dealing with the section of the bill which provides for remission of land annuity arrears, and one of the relevant arguments which Mr. Aiken made was that certain farmers were better off as a result of the dispute. He instanced dairy farmers, who were getting more in the way of export bounty than they were paying in duties, and the much-abused "grazers," who, although they "made the most howl about it," were, in his submission, not hit at all, because, even if they sold their beasts very cheaply, they had bought them still more cheaply.

THE LITTLE LESS.

Mr. Cosgrave subsequently assured him that the actual position of the latter class was that, although they got their cattle cheaply, they had since had to sell them for even less than they gave. The point of the Minister's speech, however, which most interested Opposition deputies was his reference to their argument that in paying land annuities now farmers were, in effect, paying a land tax. The Minister had defended the collection of these sums on the ground that, if the money were not got from the farmers, it would have to be got elsewhere. "Then you agree," exclaimed Mr. Belton triumphantly, "that it is a tax."

"If you wish to call it a land tax," Mr. Aiken replied, "call it a land tax; but, whatever you call it, the Government will make the people who own the land pay such sum as the community think the land will bear." In any case, there is not the slightest intention on the Government's part of entirely giving up the collection of the annuities, the House was bluntly assured.

"NOT GOOD BUSINESS."

"This method is not good business," declared Mr. Cosgrave, who followed the Minister. The proper course, he contended, in dealing with arrears, would be to examine every case, and only to forgive those debts the payment of which would cripple the debtor—not to apply the rule of thumb system which was proposed in the bill. As for all the Minister's talk about what the country was saving through holding back the annuities, that saving was costing the country more than the amount at stake—and that again was not good business.

A serious reminder by the ex-President was that the British Government, in their estimate of what must be collected, considered that they were not responsible for the sinking fund provided for the annuities. That fund amounts to about £675,000, and the point was that whenever the dispute is settled somebody will have the bill to foot for that.

This speech was one of Mr. Cosgrave's best—remarkably moderate in tone, but all the more effective for its moderation. Even Mr. Davin, the next contributor to the debate, congratulated Mr. Cosgrave, and held him up on this occasion as an example to be followed by front-benchers of both sides. "If he goes on like that, I am inclined to think, from what I know of the members of the present Government, that a settlement will soon come which will be satisfactory to the Irish people," he said, approvingly.

"It is interesting to me," Mr. Davin added, "to hear what Ministers and ex-Ministers think about the economic war; but I would rather hear when they will give up their present attitude and think more of patriotism than of their parties."

It was certainly highly gratifying to find some sections of the House thinking more of the end of the economic war than of its beginning. For those who are now seeking clues to indicate the possibilities of an early settlement, it must be confessed, however, that nothing notable emerged from any ministerial source.

DUBLIN TRADE DISPUTE.

STRIKE AT PIGEON-HOUSE WORKS.

Members of the Irish Boilermakers', Steel Shipbuilders' and Steel Constructional Workers' Trade Union employed upon the installation of a new boiler unit for the Electricity Supply Board at the Pigeon House, Dublin, have withdrawn their labour. The men have struck as a protest against the conditions of labour imposed upon them by the firm which is carrying out the contract.

The Irish workers have also taken exception to the employment of a number of German experts upon work which, they claim, could be carried out by local skilled tradesmen.

The complaint regarding conditions of work is mainly concerned with the hours, the workers having been divided into two shifts, one working from 5 a.m. to 1 p.m. and the second from 2 p.m. until 10 p.m. The strikers claim that the starting hour in the former case is unreasonable, and that the rates paid do not justify the contractor in asking the workers to work before or after the ordinary hours operating in the trade.

Officials of the Union are in touch with the Workers' Union of Ireland and other bodies having members employed on the contract in the hope of securing joint action. It is expected that a conference in connection with the dispute will be held under the auspices of the Department of Industry and Commerce to-day.

A mass picket will be placed at the Pigeon House this morning.

CONFERENCE BREAKS UP.

LIGHTER TASK ON RESUMPTION.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

THE World Economic and Monetary Conference adjourned last evening sine die after more than six weeks of endeavour to find a solution to the world crisis.

As the speeches of the leading delegates indicated, while concrete results of its labours are lacking, there is reason to suppose that when, and if, the second World Conference is convened its task will have been considerably lightened by the endeavours of the first.

Every delegate, and the President of the Conference in particular, underlined the likelihood and desirability of the Conference being reconvened at a not very distant date. A notable exception was M. Maiski (U.S.S.R.), who concluded an impassioned attack on the World Conference with no such suggestion, and confined himself to warning the delegates that an economic warfare might end in a war of arms and men; but he did not suggest any means other than further conferences for avoiding this contingency.

The theory that the work of the Conference will henceforth continue in sections still holds the field.

In that way there is still substantial reason for expectation that even some of the major purposes may be accomplished. The resummoning of the full Conference when the appropriate time arrives will be done by the Bureau.

The reason for Mr. Macdonald's pleasure yesterday was the strong moral support of the United States delegation. He was obviously delighted with President Roosevelt's message. He listened eagerly to every word of Mr. Hull's statement, and he smiled when widespread applause punctuated Mr. Hull's vigorous assertion that "We shall not quit. We have started. We mean to go on."

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE.

In his message, President Roosevelt said: "Results are not always measured in terms of formal agreement. They can come equally from the free presentation of each nation's difficulties and each nation's methods of meeting its individual needs. We in the United States understand the problems of other nations better to-day than before the Conference met, and we trust that the other nations will, in the same spirit of good-will, view our American policies, which are aimed to overcome our unprecedented economic situation at home. Such interchange, especially if it results in full discussion of all problems, and not a few only, makes progress more and not less possible in the future. That is why I do not regard the Economic Conference as a failure."

Mr. Macdonlad, in his speech, said that the resolution that they had passed kept intact the machinery that had been set up, and the Bureau would remain in active life. "As President both of the Bureau and of that Executive Committee I can promise you that this work will be done as quickly as possible."

Governor Cox moved a resolution thanking the British Government for its "exceptional hospitality," and Mr. Macdonald, as President, for his "untiring devotion, for his authority, and for his patience in directing the work of the Conference."

The delegates showed their approval by standing and applauding when the resolution was unanimously carried.

Then Mr. Macdonald declared the Conference closed, and the delegates, exchanging handshakes as they went, immediately dispersed.

DOMINIONS FRAME A POLICY.

STRENGTHENING IMPERIAL BOND.

A meeting of delegates of the Dominions was held subsequently, after which a declaration was issued signed by all the delegations, with the exception of the Irish Free State, which has referred it to the Irish Free State Government.

The declaration stated: "Now that the Conference has adjourned, the undersigned delegates of the British Commonwealth consider it appropriate to put on record their views on some of the more important matters of financial and monetary policy which were raised, but not decided, at the Conference."

Satisfaction is expressed that the Ottawa Agreements have already had beneficial effects on many branches of inter-Imperial trade, and that this process is likely to continue as the purchasing power of the various countries concerned increases. While there has not yet been sufficient time to give full effect to the various agreements made, they are convinced that the general principles agreed upon are sound.

Their conviction is reaffirmed that the lowering or removal of barriers between the countries of the Empire provided for in the Ottawa Agreements will not only facilitate the flow of goods between them, but will stimulate and increase the trade of the world.

Drawing attention to the principles of monetary and financial policy which have emerged from the work of both the Ottawa and World Conferences, and which are of the utmost importance for the countries within the British Commonwealth, the declaration stresses the importance of the rise in price levels, which has begun, being continued. As to the ultimate level to be aimed at, they do not consider it practicable to state this in precise terms. It is important that the rise in prices should not be carried to such a pitch as to produce an inflated scale of profits. They, therefore, consider that the Governments of the British Commonwealth should persist, by all means in their power, whether monetary or economic, within the limits of sound finance, in the policy of furthering the rise in wholesale prices until there is evidence that equilibrium has been re-established, and that thereupon they should take whatever measures are possible to stabilise the position thus attained.

GOLD STANDARD.

The ultimate aim of monetary policy should be the restoration of a satisfactory international gold standard, and in any further sessions of the World Conference this subject must have special prominence.

Inter-Imperial stability of exchange rates is facilitated by the fact that the United Kingdom Government has no commitments to other countries as regards the future management of sterling, and retains complete freedom of action in this respect. The adherence of other countries to a policy on similar lines would make possible the attainment and maintenance of exchange stability over a still wider area.

Among the factors working for the economic recovery of the countries of the Commonwealth, special importance attaches to the decline in the rate of interest on long-term loans. The progress which has been made in that direction, as well as in the resumption of overseas lending by the London market, is noted with satisfaction.

They will recommend their Governments to consult with one another from time to time on monetary and economic policy, with a view to establishing their common purpose and to the framing of such measures as may conduce towards its achievement.

DOG SAVES MASTER.

Thomas Maher, farmer, had a narrow escape from death when attacked by a bull, his own property, on his farm near Loughrea.

Maher struggled for some time endeavouring to beat off the infuriated bull, but eventually he was knocked down. The bull tore the clothes completely off the man's body, when a little dog, owned by Maher, seeing the perilous position of his master, caught the bull's tail, which he kept biting.

The bull then turned his attention to the dog, and Maher was able to make his escape without being seriously injured. The bull was afterwards destroyed.

CITY OF GREAT ACHIEVEMENTS.

VISITORS' PRAISE FOR DUBLIN.

ELEVATING TONE OF HUMAN LIFE.

SPEECHES AT THE B.M.A. DINNER.

THE annual dinner of the British Medical Association was held last evening in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, Dr. T. Gillman Moorhead, President of the Association, and President of the Royal College of Physicians, Ireland, in the chair.

The toasts of "The King" and "Eire" having been honoured,

DUBLIN CITY.

Professor Arthur Burgess proposed "The City of Dublin." He said that he was an ardent admirer of Dublin and of this beautiful country. He had probably seen more of Ireland than most Irishmen. This was his sixth visit to Dublin. He had reason to remember his first visit in July, 1907, for within three hours of his arrival the Crown Jewels were stolen. (Laughter.) Four years ago his own house in Manchester was entered, and, as the burglars had not been traced, he himself did not know where the Crown Jewels were. (Laughter.) He expressed the gratitude of all the members of the British Medical Association to the City of Dublin for all that it had done for them during the past week, and to the local organising committee for making this, admittedly and unquestionably, the most successful annual meeting of recent times. (Applause.)

He referred to the great achievements of Dublin city in every branch of art and science and commerce, and said that, in proportion to its size, Dublin had done more than any other city in the world to elevate the tone of human life and to advance the intellectual status of mankind.

The Lord Mayor, responding, paid a tribute to the work of the medical profession in combating tuberculosis, and alluded to the splendid work of Lady Aberdeen for the people of this country. (Applause.) They had thousands of people in Dublin clamouring for houses. For three hundred cottages they had eleven thousand applicants. It was a waste of money to send people to institutions for the cure of tuberculosis, and then, when they were discharged, to have no place for them to go to. Here was work for the Government and for the municipalities not alone in Dublin, but throughout the country. Those who would be called upon to find the money would get good value for it in the real cure of tuberculosis. (Applause.)

All parties were anxious to co-operate in mitigating the hardships which the people were suffering, and, if they could induce the people to stay on the land and produce more food, even if they had to be given a guaranteed price for it, it would be for the good of the community.

THE ASSOCIATION.

The Chief Justice proposed the toast of "The British Medical Association." After recalling his associations with the conference of 1887, he said that the delegates at this year's conference found the people of Ireland in the throes of re-building and creating our own national life after an effective revolution. It was a remarkable fact of that revolution, that those engaged in it were determined to reform Local Government and the administration of the public health services. Two years before the Treaty, in defiance of what was then the accepted law, our revolutionaries were engaged in laying the foundations of public health; and, after the Treaty, the activities which were seen during the week had foundations upon which effective work could be achieved.

Proceeding, the Chief Justice alluded to the highly equipped and highly efficient hospitals which we had in this country, and paid a tribute to the work and worth of Professor Moorhead.

Dublin, he added, was glad to welcome the British Medical Association, and would be glad to see them again.

VALUE OF THE MEETINGS.

Responding to the toast, Sir Henry Brackenbury said that the welcome accorded to the British Medical Association was remarkable, the hospitality overwhelming, and the kindness beyond belief.

Having referred to the fact that the Association had elected the Marchioness of Aberdeen as an honorary member, Sir Henry said that he wished to thank the Press of Dublin for the publicity given to the proceedings of the Conference. The Dublin newspapers had, in their treatment of the Conference, been very sympathetic and appreciative. He also paid a tribute to the memory of Sir James Craig and Sir William Taylor.

"Our meetings," he continued, "not merely contribute to the maintenance of professional honour, to the increase of medical science and public health, and to the advance of science and art, but may have even some influence in contributing to the friendliness and sympathy of peoples from various countries, who hope for a better understanding and co-operation of administrations and governments." (Applause.)

IRELAND'S GRATITUDE.

Proposing the toast of "The Guests," Dr. F. C. Crawley, President, Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, said that they had come from many lands and made long journeys to join them in Ireland.

"We are," he said, "extremely grateful. You have helped us in our education, you have taught many of us that there are other ways of looking at things in this world than the Irish way.

"An Irishman loves three things. He likes to look back on history, he loves a friend, and the third is that he loves hospitality."

Dr. T. L. Lindsay Sandes, O.B.E., M.D., President, South African Federal Council, British Medical Association, and Alderman Hubbard Clark, responded.

The latter said it was the general opinion of the people of the city that the President had brought honour and credit to Dublin. The same applied to Mrs. Moorhead, whose duties in connection with the meeting had been numerous.

THE PRESIDENT.

The toast of the President was proposed by Sir William de Courcy Wheeler, who said that the President had been described as the centre of gravity of this great meeting. He thought that the President could best be described as the pivot round which the greatest medical Association in the world, with its 35,000 members, would revolve during the next twelve months.

Professor Moorhead, in responding, said that he could not have undertaken the task of the next twelve months without the aid of Mrs. Moorhead. He expressed his thanks for the supreme honour conferred on him by his election as President of the British Medical Association.

THE GOLF CUPS.

Sir William de Courcy Wheeler announced that the following were the winners of the golf cups:—

Notts Cup—Miss O'Connor, Celbridge.
Childe Cup—Dr. O'Donovan.
Leinster Cup—Mr. P. Kelly.

Among the principal guests present were: The Marchioness of Aberdeen and Temair, Lord HolmPatrick, the Archbishop of Dublin and Mrs. Gregg, Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Sir Ewen McLean, the President of the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland; the Chief Justice and Mrs. Kennedy, Mr. Justice Johnston and Mrs. Johnston, the President, University College, Dublin; Mrs. Moorhead, Mrs Burgess, Professor Emil Novak, Dr. Edouard Ceresole, Mr. and Mrs. Le Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Harman, Professor Denn Lewis, Dr. Ramsay, and Mrs. Crawley.

CLAREMORRIS SHOW

BIG ENTRY OF FINE QUALITY STOCK.

From Our Correspondent.

CLAREMORRIS, Thursday.

There were over one hundred entries at Claremorris Show to-day more than those at last years fixture. The quality of stock exhibited in all classes was of a very high standard, particularly in the cattle and sheep sections, whilst in the horse divisions high-class blood animals were on view.

The Minister for Defence lost the O'Connell Cup for the best jumper over the course, this trophy being awarded to Thomas King, Ballina. Awards:—

Irish Draught Sire—1, Michael Hyland, Kilmaine—Home Rule.

Mare (calculated to breed hunters)—1, Thomas Egan, Kiltimagh; 2, John O'Malley, Carramore.

Irish Draught Mare (with foal at foot)—1, Michael Jennings, Ballinrobe; 2, Stephen Flanagan, Castlebar.

Filly or Gelding (three to four years, for agricultural purposes)—1, Michael Gilligan, Claremorris; 2, Thomas Reilly, Ahena.

Trained Filly (to make a Hunter)—1, R. B. Scott, Ballina; 2, Fraser Rowlette, Crossmolina. Untrained Gelding or Filly (to make Hunter)—Same winners. Gelding or Filly (three years, to make Hunter)—1, Senator J. E. McEllin—Brize; 2, P. S. Daly, Loughmask. Two years old—1, R. B. Scott, Barnfield; 2, Joseph Valkenburg, Ballinrobe.

Colt, Gelding or Filly (one year, to make Hunter)—1, Patrick Merrick, Castlebar; 2, Ml. Walsh, Ballina. Foal, to make Hunter—1, Mrs. Prendergast, Ardroe; 2, John F. Brennan, Ballymote. Cob (not less than three years, suitable for Saddle or Harness—1, C. French O'Rourke, Tuam; 2, Patrick Merrick, Castlebar. Trained Mare or Gelding (general purposes type) — 1, John F. Brennan, Ballymote; 2, William Hyland, Caherlistane, Co. Galway. Light-Weight Hunter (up to 13st.)—1, R. B. Scott, Ballina; 2, Peter Hanley, Ballina.

CATTLE.

Shorthorn Bull—1, J. R. Barbour, Knockbeg—Collooney Gold Crest; 2, A. H. Armstrong, Willowbrook, Sligo—Cash Lady IV.

Pure-bred Registered Dairy Shorthorn Bull—Same winners.

Aberdeen-Angus Bull—1, A. H. Armstrong, Sligo—Eclipse of Ballymacad; 2, John Mulkeen, Ballyfarna—Gunner of Kelton.

Hereford Bull—1, James O'Boyle, Killala; 2, Isaac Fair, Westport. Licensed Bull (non-pedigree)—1, Martin Conway, Irishtown; 2, T. Dixon, Maltpool.

Champion Cow or Heifer (dairy shorthorn type)—1, Mrs. T. J. Flanagan, Brickens; 2, Joseph Valkenburgh, Ballinrobe. In this class the winner was awarded the Castlemagarrett Cup, presented by Lord Oranmore and Browne.

Aberdeen-Angus Cow—1, Frank W. Higgins, Skeen, Sligo; 2, James O'Boyle, Killala. Hereford Cow—1, Hon. A. E. Guinness, Cong—June Second; 2, ditto—Jest.

Kerry Cow—1, Rev. J. C. White, P.P., Bekan; 2, Mark Healy, Claremorris.

Cow (any breed)—1, J. Veldon, Claremorris; 2, T. Clarke, Claremorris.

Bullock (Shorthorn type)—1, T. McNicholas, Swinford; 2, T. Clarke, Claremorris.

Bullock (Aberdeen-Angus breed)—1, T. Reilly, Ahena, Claremorris; 2, T. Clarke, Claremorris.

Bullock (any breed)—1, Roddy Healy, Ballyhaunis; 2, T. Clarke, Claremorris.

Heifer (Dairy Shorthorn type, three years old)—1, P. J. Kilcullen, Enniscrone; 2, J. Nally, Coolmaheen.

The McEllin Cup (presented by Senator McEllin) was won by Mrs. M. J. Flanagan, Brickens, whose entry took first prize in the Heifer (Dairy Shorthorn) Class.

DUBLIN FAMILY'S ESCAPE

FROM BURNING PUBLIC-HOUSE.

A serious outbreak of fire occurred shortly after three o'clock this morning in the public-house of Mr. Robert Roper, at the corner or Benburb street and Ellis place, Dublin.

A passer-by raised the alarm, and neighbours rushed to the side-door and hammered at it until they roused Mr. Roper, his wife and two children, who were sleeping on the premises over the shop.

These quickly made their escape through the side-door, as the flames were eating away the front door and windows.

Two sections of the City Fire Brigade, under Captain Connolly, rushed to the scene, and succeeded in getting the outbreak under control.

COUNTY DERRY ASSIZES.

DECREASE IN CRIME.

Addressing the Grand Jury at County Derry Assizes yesterday, Mr. Justice Brown said that County Derry was peaceful, and specially reported cases numbered only 19, compared with 24 in the corresponding period last year.

The Grand Jury passed a resolution regretting the resignation of Mr. Moore Munn, Clerk of the Crown and Peace, after 40 years' service.

Patrick Joseph Bell, of Cookstown district, pleaded "guilty" to breaking into a school at Tullybrick, County Derry, on 17th July and stealing various articles.

There were 16 previous convictions, and Bell was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

Charles Lynch, farm labourer, Enagh Lough, was charged with maliciously setting fire to two stacks of straw belonging to David Cuthbert, of Culkeeragh, in March last. At the previous Assizes the jury had disagreed, and the jury yesterday again disagreed. Lynch was discharged, to appear at the next Assizes on continuing bail.

SEAMEN AND PORT WORKERS.

There has been an interesting sequel to the recent establishment of the Irish Dockers' Union. The new body has been amalgamated with the newly-established Irish Seamen's Union, under the title of the Irish Seamen's and Port Workers' Union.

In addition to the Dublin branch, the union has been established in Cork, Belfast and Newry.

WORLD EDUCATION CONFERENCE.

DISTINGUISHED FOREIGN DELEGATES.

A letter received yesterday by the Organising Secretary and Director, Mr. T. J. O'Connell, announces the appointment by the Japanese Government of an additional delegate to the Conference in the person of Dr. M. Ogasawara, Medical Officer of Health, Ministry of Education, Japan.

Dr. Ogasawara will arrive in Dublin on Monday morning next from London. The name of Dr. Masanori Oshima, of Tokyo, has already been announced as principal representative of the Japanese Imperial Government at the Conference.

Another distinguished foreign delegate due to arrive on Sunday morning next is Senorita Margarita Comas, Barcelona, who is to read a paper in the Illiteracy Section of the Conference on the subject of illiteracy in Spain.

The Reception Committee are hoping to be able to arrange for a short run on the Drumm train for the overseas delegates, many of whom have intimated their desire to include this in the experiences of their visit to Ireland.

The number registered to date would in itself constitute a fair-sized conference, and it is expected that the total attendance will exceed the two thousand mark. A wide variety of professions and avocations is represented in the names so far registered at the offices, 9 Gardiner's place, Dublin.

SWIMMER DROWNED NEAR SALTHILL.

SHIP'S STEWARD FROM LIVERPOOL.

Death from drowning, owing to exhaustion caused by prolonged exertion in the water, was the verdict returned at the inquest held by Dr. J. P. Brennan, Coroner for South County Dublin, on the body of Raymond Frazer (27), ship's steward, of Shakespeare street, Garston, Liverpool, who was drowned at Salthill, Co. Dublin, on Wednesday.

Edmund McNally, also of Garston, said that he and Frazer came to Dún Laoghaire a week ago, and on Wednesday Frazer set out to swim from Salthill to Dún Laoghaire Pier and back. On the return journey he suddenly disappeared.

William Alders, De Vesci place, Dún Laoghaire, said that while bathing near Salthill they heard the man in the water shout, and he and his brother swam out to assist him, but he sank before they reached him.

The Coroner said that Mr. Alders and those who were with him deserved the greatest credit.

INDUSTRIAL CREDIT BILL.

AMENDMENTS FROM SENATE ACCEPTED.

In the Dail yesterday, Mr. MacEntee, Minister for Finance, stated that the Government accepted the following recommendations from the Senate on the Industrial Credit Bill, 1933:—"That there shall be a managing director of the company, and, subject to the next following sub-paragraph, the directors of the company shall from time to time appoint one of their body to be managing director of the company.

"That the first managing director of the company shall be such one of the directors as the Minister may appoint, and shall hold office for such period, not exceeding five years, on such terms, and subject to such conditions, as the Minister may direct."

The House agreed to the recommendations.

In reply to Mr. Good, the Minister said that no salary would be fixed until after negotiations between the Minister and the persons to be asked to act as directors.

A TIPPERARY FARM.

ORDER FOR PAYMENT OF £800 PURCHASE MONEY.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH.)

In an action in which John Butler, farmer, Ballytore, Co. Kildare, was plaintiff, and Thomas Dwyer, farmer Ballinamona, Goold's Cross, Co. Tipperary, was defendant,

Mr. P. J. McEnery (instructed by Messrs. J. T. Darcy and Co.), for the plaintiff, applied for judgment in the action, which was for specific performance of an agreement of April 7, 1932, by which the defendant purchased from the plaintiff a farm situated at Cluen, Goold's Cross, for £1,000 and £50 auctioneers' fees.

Counsel said that the defendant had long since entered into possession of the farm, having accepted plaintiff's title, and had paid portion of the purchase money, but £800 of it still remained due. The plaintiff had since bought another farm in Co. Kildare and was living there. Plaintiff asked for judgment for £800 and a declaration that he had a lien on the land sold to the defendant.

There was no appearance for the defendant.

Mr. Justice Meredith gave judgment for the plaintiff for £800, with interest at 5 per cent. from the date of the signing of the agreement (April 7, 1932), and a declaration that the plaintiff had a lien on the lands until the amount due was paid. He also awarded the plaintiff his costs of the action, and gave him liberty to apply for an order for the sale of the lands, if necessary.

HIGH-GRADE HUNTERS.

ENNISCORTHY SHOW AWARDS.

GOOD SHORTHORNS.

From Our Agricultural Correspondent.

ENNISCORTHY, Thursday.

FOR the fifty-sixth annual show of the County Wexford United Agricultural Society, held in the Showgrounds, Enniscorthy, to-day, there were over 600 entries in ordinary competition, and 120 dogs in 86 classes. In point of numbers, hunters were as good as last year, while the exhibits also reached a high level of merit. Three-year-olds, likely to make hunters, were exceptionally good, and included an outstanding winner in the promising brown gelding by He Goes—Longcroft, shown by Mr. P. Doyle, Craanford. This animal has been sold to the Hon. Mrs. Munday, a well-known cross-Channel follower of hounds, at a three figure price. Brood mares also showed a high level of merit, being described by some of the judges as well above the average. Two-year-olds could only be described as moderate, but yearlings were good.

The entry of cattle was much the same as last year numerically. In point of quality the exhibits were highly meritorious, especially in the classes for dairy cows. Shorthorns generally were worthy of the high reputation of County Wexford, and the breed championship went to Mr. R. A. Latta's red March calf, Remus by Garguston Highland Leader. Mr. Thomas Hutton's red yearling, Ninth Broadhooks, was reserve, and also won the Fitzgerald Cup for best pedigree beast, the property of a tenant-farmer and a member of the Society.

One of the most interesting sections was that for donkeys, of which there were over 20 entries distributed over five classes.

There was a fine display of poultry and butter.

The day was fine, but cloudy, and there was a fair attendance, especially during the jumping competitions.

The judging was conducted expeditiously, and the arrangements worked smoothly.

Chief awards:—

THE AMERICAN MARKETS

INVESTMENT ISSUES IN GOOD DEMAND: STRONG CLOSE.

Reuter's Telegrams.

NEW YORK, Thursday.

The Stock Exchange to-day displayed a quiet strength, with a lack of any signs of boisterous enthusiasm. Advances of 1 to 2 points were numerous at the close, but business was again very restricted, the turnover for the day totalling only 2,460,000 shares.

Prices at the opening were steady, and during the morning the market retained its newly-found composure. The buoyancy of the Grain markets and other commodities was a bullish factor but the prices of staples appear to have lost the dominating influence which they have excited on the Stock market in recent weeks. Moreover the gyrations of the dollar seemed to be ignored.

Under the leadership of Rails, Steels and Specialities, a number of the leading issues rose 1 to 3 points, including Pennsylvania, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Steel Common, Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, American Can, Industrial Alcohol and J. I. Case. It was reported that Europe was again a buyer after unloading in volume last week.

Towards the end a spasm of profit-taking almost wiped out the earlier gains, but the market rallied impressively in the final half-hour, rebounding to about the previous levels. The close was strong.

The Bethlehem Steel Corporation's statement for the quarter ended June shows a net deficit of 3,313,000 dollars, as compared with a deficit of 4,671,000 dollars for the June quarter last year.

The Consolidated Gas Company of New York reports a net income for the year ended June 30 of 53,209,000 dollars, compared with 62,318,000 for the previous year.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Thursday.

Reports from Washington indicating that the farm administrators are planning to increase exports of wheat from the Pacific Coast to the Orient and are possibly using part of the proceeds of the processing tax for financing the programme had a stimulating effect on the grain market to-day. A renewal of outside buying assisted the upward movement, and a broad trade developed, but price movements were erratic. Bullish crop news was the dominating factor, with enormous realising easily absorbed. Wheat advanced on purchasing by mills and good Eastern absorption, while bullish crop and weather reports from the North-Western area had a further helpful effect. Maize values stengthened on reports of damage by chinch bugs in Illinois and owing to the moderate character of country offerings. The firmness of wheat was another favourable influence. Rye fluctuated in unison with wheat, while oats improved under the influence of bullish crop advices.

WHEAT opened strong, 4⅝c. to 6⅝c. higher. The close was strong at 7½c. to 7⅞c. gain.

See the difference with FILM removed!

Dull teeth mean teeth covered with a film—that danger coating which slowly, steadily accumulates, makes teeth yellow and harbours germs of decay. Run your tongue over your teeth and feel film—a slippery, viscous coating.

Ordinary ways of brushing fail to remove film successfully. So dentists urge Pepsodent. With its new polishing material—twice as soft as those commonly in use—the way Pepsodent removes every trace of film stain is revolutionary.

Try Pepsodent. Watch film go. Watch teeth regain their whiteness.

THE LATE MR. JOHN C. BOOTH.

The funeral of Mr. John C. Booth took place on Wednesday morning at Drumcondra Church, where a short Service was held. Rev. T. J. Cummins, M.A., officiated, assisted by the Rev. T. Byers, B.A., of Ormond Quay Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Booth was for the past ten years manager of the Dublin branch of Messrs. Dimier Bros., watch manufacturers, and was held in great esteem by a large circle of business friends. He was a prominent member of the Masonic Order, and took a great interest in the charities connected with this body. He was secretary of Curragh Lodge 397 for a number of years.—

Among the relatives and general public who attended were:—William McManus, A. A. Thompsoin, S. M. Bradshaw, R. Murphy, L. Brierley, L. Frieley, T. P. Byrne, J. R. Martin, R. Murphy, junior; Valentine H. Gordon, E. R. Jones, R. O. Paine, Ralph Anderson, Charles S. Morewood, W. A. Gillespie, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Garner, Mrs. Ludgate, Mrs. Wincle, Thomas Tennant, George Pepper, James Steer, Charles B. W. Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. R. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dardis, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, J. Nixon, William Pepper, the Rev. T. Byers, F. Onslow Morgan, J. Woodrow, R. J. Hardy, R. Olliffe, R. Bowles, W. George J. Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Blake, William McDowell, A. G. Butler, H. McDowell.

THE LATE MR. JAMES H. CLARKE.

There was a large attendance at the funeral of Mr. James H. Clarke, late of the Stores Department, General Post Office, Dublin, which took place to Glasnevin Cemetery.

Mr. Clarke in recent years, successfully carried out the arrangements in connection with the over-printing of the British postage stamps, and the special postage stamps issued to mark the centenary of Catholic Emancipation, the Royal Dublin Society bi-centenary and the Eucharistic Congress.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE.

FOXHUNTER FAILS.

SANS PEINE'S SURPRISE IN THE GOODWOOD CUP.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

GOODWOOD, Thursday Night.

EVERYTHING changed swiftly in half an hour here this afternoon, and in more senses than one. It had been the usual sunny, hot morning, but the sun disappeared after the second race and rain began to fall. A heat shower it might be called; but it continued through the rest of the afternoon, and took away some of the pleasure of the meeting.

The sun disappeared behind clouds, and it was as well, for one could hardly have borne his presence after Foxhunter, with odds of 5 to 2 laid on him, broke down in the race for the Goodwood Cup, which was won by his stable companion, Sans Peine, who was only started so as to ensure a good pace for the Gold Cup winner, and was returned at 20 to 1.

It was a dumbfounding result, for if there was a racing certainty this looked to be one for Foxhunter, with the ground too firm for Brown Jack, and Brulette not looking well or thought to be at anything like her best. This was a race in which those speculators who lay the odds in large units could bet their maximum. But the Goodwood Cup has an unpleasant habit of defeating such people; and one can throw the mind back more than twenty years ago to the day when Bayardo, with 33 to 1 laid on him, was beaten by Magic.

MAIL FIST NOT STARTED.

For once in a way Mail Fist was not started to make the pace for Brown Jack, but there was really no need for him as Sans Peine was there, and also an unexpected runner in the shape of the grey Ximenes, a brother to the brilliant Xandover, who had run well in the race for the Stakes yesterday.

Ximenes appeared to want the limelight, for when they had settled down he began to take himself away from the others, and before going six furlongs he was twenty lengths in front of Sans Peine. The latter was leading Foxhunter by six lengths, with Brown Jack next and Brulette last.

When they were six furlongs from home E. Smith, the young jockey on Sans Peine, showed, I thought, more judgment than his seniors on the fancied horses. He went up to Ximenes and led him into the straight. It was clear that Donoghue on Brown Jack and Childs on Foxhunter had left themselves with a great deal to do.

FOXHUNTER BREAKS DOWN.

When they were well in the straight Childs began to get a move on and Foxhunter began a good run. He was making up ground well when two furlongs from home, and on the outside he began to edge out to the middle of the course and to lose his action. It must have been then that he broke down. Brown Jack was running on strongly, but he could not make up the ground and was beaten four lengths.

Foxhunter was walking very lame when he came back to the paddock. It was on the seen an owner and trainer who had just an owner and trainer who had just won the Goodwood Cup so sad-looking as Mr. Edward Esmond and Jack Jarvis, for their hopes and those of their friends were centred, of course, in Foxhunter, and to see his stable companion win was almost staggering.

Great credit must be given to the boy who rode him. If he had not obeyed the golden rule of coming away about his business Brown Jack would have beaten him.

A GOOD STAYER.

Sans Peine, who is by Sansovino, is a good stayer. He was bred by the Countess of Derby at the small stud she runs independently of her husband at Newmarket, which was founded by her daughter, the late Lady Victoria Bullock. He belongs to that good family of Glasalt, going back to Corrie Roy and Broad Corrie, ancestresses of Colorado.

I mentioned last night that if Rosemary's Pet were ever to win a race the Singleton Handicap, on a descending five furlongs and the top of the ground, was his opportunity. He won his race, but it was only by the width of a cat's whisker that he beat Valkyrie. The latter, by the way, made no show whatever in the Molyneux Cup at Liverpool, and finished a long way behind Gold Bridge and Rosemary's Pet.

DELICIA MAKES THE PACE.

Delicia was first away, and raced along with Figaro until she suddenly dropped out more than four furlongs from home. For some distance Rosemary's Pet was cut off, but then he got an opening, and it looked as if he were coming away to win easily. Then he appeared as if he wanted to stop, but Carslake made him come again, and he just got the verdict from the other.

There was a great furore for Lord Glanely's Jodhpur before the first race, the Craven Stakes, and he started favourite. He did not have the best of luck in running, Donoghue being baulked for an opening, and he failed to get up, and was beaten a neck by a 10 to 1 chance, Mr. Thornton Smith's Cotoneaster, a daughter of Apple Sammy. Air-Captain was only beaten a neck for second place.

LO ZINGARO LANDS THE ODDS.

Long odds had to be betted on Mr. Arthur Dewar's Lo Zingaro, a son of Solario and Love in Idleness, in the Prince of Wales's Stakes, and they were easily landed. Sunderland led him for a time, and then when he had taken a good lead Beary tried to challenge on Turbotin, but the Aga Khan's colt began to swerve first to the right and then to the left, and was well beaten.

The Drayton Handicap, which followed, produced a good race, Sir H. Hirst's Galvani, a son of Prince Gallahad and Diadem's daughter, Donnina, winning by a short head from Wraxhall with Coldstream, two lengths away, third, and Rolling Rock, who had just beaten Galvani at Newmarket, fourth.

After this there came an uninteresting match between Lady Durham's Montez and the Duke of Norfolk's Quicksilver, in which the former made all the running, and beat the other easily.

Nothing is coming right yet for the horses owned by the Aga Khan. Long odds were laid on his colt, Osman Pasha, in the Rous Memorial Stakes, but, although he did better than Bay Monk yesterday, he was beaten three-parts of a length by Bidou, a Stratford colt, bred by Mr. John Harris, and sold at Doncaster to Major Arthur Bonsor, for whom Frank Hartigan trains.

SELECTIONS.

The Chesterfield Cup is the chief event tomorrow. This is a high-class handicap, and there will be a field of horses worthy of it, headed by Colorado Kid and Hill Cat. I am doubtful whether either of these can give the weight to Short Hand, whom I noted at the time as having been unlucky when his young jockey left himself too much ground to make up in the Sandown Anniversary Cup. The form was further advertised yesterday by the easy win of Seminole.

Double Arch, who won at the meeting last year, may find the ground firmer than he likes it. The same remark applies to Venturer. Litigation has a chance with his light weight, and Flange missed the Liverpool Cup for this. I take Flange to be the chief danger to SHORT HAND.

The Chichester Stakes may be won by CINNABAR, to whom the danger is Scattercash.

In the Gordon Stakes I give a chance to TAVERN. FLINDERS should win the Molecomb Stakes for Lieutenant-Colonel Loder.

In the Nassau Stakes for fillies, Betty and Brown Betty can renew opposition. The latter has fallen a little from grace since she won the One Thousand, and Betty may beat her here, but may not give the weight to SOLFATARA.

Takng the running in the Lancashire Breeders' Stakes as a guide, HESPERITUS, who was second to the Mellowness filly, should win the Findon Stakes, the last race of the meeting.

GALTEE MORE.

CHESTERFIELD CUP.

SEGESTA MAY REPEAT LAST YEAR'S SUCCESS IN CHICHESTER STAKES.

GOODWOOD'S last stage will find the racing every bit as interesting as on the previous three days. The chief prize, the Chesterfield Cup, will bring together a highly representative field of middle distance performers. Lieut.-Colonel Loder's "Jubilee" Stakes and Royal Hunt Cup winner, Colorado Kid, has been sent to shoulder his 9st. 6lb., and this improving four-year-old is fully expected to put up another bold bid. In my opinion, however, he has been given a little too much weight, and one I prefer is Hill Cat, who is a year older and something of a champion over this distance—ten furlongs. Henin has not been "thrown in" the handicap, and I have more regard for Short Hand, whose form when third to Montrose and Seminole at Sandown looks attractive since the last-named's victory on Wednesday. Double Arch and Galdennis have not run up to expectations recently, and although there was no more impressive winner at Ascot than Rock Star when winning the Bessborough Stakes, I expect some of his opponents to go too fast for him over this shorter journey. Both Plantagenet and Leighon have chances on some running. Flange appears to be reasonably well treated, for he has won twice this year over to-day's distance. Another nicely handicapped is Melfort, the only doubt about him being as to his ability to get the distance.

There are good accounts from Ilsley concerning Caymanas, who has not looked back since winning at Newbury from Montrose, while The Blue Boy, who has not been beaten out of a place in four races, must come bang into the picture. As he ran so well against Interlace over one mile and five furlongs at Liverpool he should get this trip comfortably. With the exception of Madagascar, I have not much faith in the others, and choosing from Hill Cat, Flange, Melfort and the last-named is preferred on the score of consistency.

The Chichester Stakes is a well-framed handicap, and there are about half a dozen candidates with attractive chances. I fancy, however, that may be the best bet. She won the race last year under only a pound less, and is well enough in.

SEGESTA (each way)

TAVERN,

who was a creditable third to Raymond and Dastur in the Princess of Wales's Stakes, looks an outstanding choice for the Gordon Stakes, and I do not intend to look beyond for the Molecome Stakes.

BROWN BETTY

is a better stayer than Betty according to Oaks running, and she is preferred in the Nassau Stakes.

ACHTENAN

is my fancy for the Findon Stakes.

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY.

A good programme is set to finish up the Goodwood fixture. The penalised Hevusina and will be seen out for the Chichester Stakes, and I prefer the last-named.

Beacon Hill will contest the Gordon Stakes, but I do not fancy him a great deal. Misanthrope could not be better, but my vote goes to TAVERN (next best).

A big field will be seen out for the Chesterfield Cup Colorado Kid, who is top-weight, I do not think capable of giving 1lb. to Hill Cat, who will be running over his best distance, and he should beat Henin. I expect Short Hand to give a good account of himself, as he ran well at his last attempt. Rock Star is well, and fancied, and I prefer his chance to that of Plantagenet. Flange is preferred to Estate Duty and Knight of the Vale, and may prove the chief danger to

HILL CAT*

Lady Day, Manhu, Flying Coot and will contest the Molcomb Stakes, and I prefer the last-named.

SOLFATARA

is more reliable than Steppon and Sea Treasure, and I do not think Brown Betty will concede her 17lb. in the Nassau Stakes.

I take

to win the Findon Stakes. Portrait colt, Thauma, London Calling, Achtenan, Polariscope and Roman Galley also run.

At Catterick Bridge my fancies are:—3.0, Minimax; 3.30, Muscovile; 5.30, Hesitation.

QUALIFYING MATCHES FOR NOVICE CUP.

COLLINSTOWN ...... 2 MEADOWBANK 1

The two qualifying matches for the final of the Novices' Cup, to be played on Saturday, were decided at the A.I.P.C., Phœnix Park, yesterday. In the first game Collinstown narrowly defeated Meadowbank by 2 goals to 1, and later Beech Park qualified by a similar margin over Northumberland.

Collinstown scored first through Mr. M. Arnott early in the first chukkar. In the second quarter Mr. J. Martin registered the best goal of the match for Meadowbank, after Mr. Slocock had struck the post with a fast shot. Mr. Leonard scored the deciding goal for Collinstown late in the third chukkar. Teams:—

Collinstown—Mr. D. Donnelly, Mr. J. Leonard, Mr. M. Arnott, Major T. W. Kirkwood.

Meadowbank—Mr. R. H. Usher, Mr. S. Slocock, Mr. J. Durack, Mr. J. Martin.

Umpire—Mr. J. Larminie.

BEECH PARK ...... 2 NORTHUMBERLAND 1

The second semi-final was the better of the two games, and was played at a fast pace considering the treacherous and cut-up condition of the ground following the afternoon's heavy rain.

All three goals came in the second chukkar Soon after the re-start Mr. Dixon, from a standing position, scored Beech Park's first goal. Immediately following Mr. Johnston equalised for Northumberland with a well-placed shot. From the throw-in Northumberland again attacked, but Mr. C. Martin broke away to half-way, and Mr. Magee, carrying on the movement, scored a delightful goal, to give Beech Park the right to enter the final. Teams:—

Beech Park—Mr. J. M. Dixon, Mr. C. Martin, Mr. W. Magee, Mr. J. W. Shackleton.

Northumberland—Herr von Dehn, Mr. A. Ormsby, Mr. J. Johnston, Major J. O'Rorke.

Umpire—Mr. J. Leonard.

A POINTER FOR GALWAY

DOUBLES FOR TWO RIDERS AND A TRAINER AT POWERSTOWN.

THE attendance at Powerstown Park yesterday was somewhat disappointing, in view of the attractive programme provided, the reason being, it was thought, that so many people are away on holidays at present. Except for one shower, just as racing was about to commence, the weather remained fine and the meeting proved a very enjoyable one.

COUNTRY TRAINER'S DOUBLE.

Mr. John Kirwan, whose stable is at Gowran, County Kilkenny, has had a successful season so far, and he added two further scores to his credit by saddling the winners of the first two races. He won the Donegal Hurdle Plate with Mr. P. Walsh's Herod's Fancy, who got the better of Lurrigadhaun after jumping the last hurdle and won by a length. Kilmoganny, who won a steeplechase at Limerick recently, was favourite, but never appeared to have a chance of tackling either of the first and second horses. The second of Kirwan's winners was Lovely Herod, who led all the way in the Connaught Steeplechase and won in the easiest fashion. He jumped in far better style than any of his opponents, and for this reason had them all worn down. He, like the first winner from the stable, is by Herod Philip, and was also ridden by the stable jockey, A. P. Thompson.

AMATEUR RIDER'S TWO WINS.

Another double event score at the meeting was that of Mr. H. J. Delmege, who steered home two winners. His first success was on Lapwing, a full brother to Fairy Wings, on whom he won a steeplechase at Mallow on the previous day. Lapwing was an odds on favourite for the Foxhunters' Plate, and, staying on better than any of the others, the son of Stornoway won in comfortable style from Villa, who only came upon the scene in the closing stages.

Mr. Delmege's win on Farraboy in the Tipperary Hurdle Race was not so easily gained; in fact, before the last hurdle was reached it looked long odds against him overhauling Slander, who had been in the lead from the start. Mr. Delmege never ceased to persevere with his mount, who acted well on the rise to the winning post, and was rewarded by getting his mount up in the last few strides to win by a neck. Farraboy now incurs a 5lb. penalty in the Galway Hurdle Race, which brings his weight to 11st. 3lb., which will enable Mr. Delmege to ride without having to waste.

A CONSISTENT HORSE.

The consistent Storm Signal, who won at the last Limerick Junction meeting and finished third in three previous races, beat a big field in the Kilkenny Plate, and Silver Loch, who finished second to Fairy Wings at Mallow on Wednesday, easily accounted for Recollection and two others in the three miles steeplechase.

The catering was by Mrs. Lawlor and Sons, Nas Na Riog Hotel, Naas.

ATHLETICS AND HEALTH.

"The cult of athletics has grown in Ireland in recent years. All forms of football attract large numbers of players; hockey and hurling are as popular as ever; and there has been a great activity in track and field athletics. Boxing has spread throughout the land, and there is no form of sport which makes greater demand for thorough discipline of mind and body. But much remains to be done. In particular, there is need for the provision of playing fields throughout the country, more especially in connection with the primary schools.

"It might fairly be argued that the decrease in the incidence of tuberculosis, particularly tuberculosis of the lungs, is due just as much to the increased activity in the open-air of young adults as to the public health measures which have been adopted in recent years."

—Dr. R. J. Rowlette, in the "Health and Hygiene Supplement" to the "Irish Times." Price 2d.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

Yearlings for Kildangan.

Mr. T. O'Leary, the well-known Kildare breeder, has sent two good-looking yearlings to Mr. R. More-O'Ferrall's Kildangan establishment. They are a brown filly by Greek Bachelor out of La Spia and a brown filly by Salisbury out of Rondine. Both are well-grown, handsome youngsters, and if looks count for anthing they will surely be heard of during next season. The Rondine filly is one of the first progeny of the Irish Two Thousand Guineas winner, Salisbury.

Dastur and Firdaussi for Stud.

H.H. Aga Khan's Dastur and Firdaussi are retiring from racing at the end of the present season, and will stand in England next year each at a fee of 200 sovs. Dastur won the King Edward VII. Stakes at Ascot, the Irish Derby at the Curragh, and the Sussex Stakes at Goodwood last year. Firdaussi won the St. Leger last year, also the Gordon Stakes, Goodwood; the Duke of York Plate, York, and the Jockey Club Stakes, Newmarket. He has not won a race this season.

Goodwood Tote Turnover.

The totalisator at Goodwood was in good demand yesterday and £32,367 4s. was taken during the afternoon, the daily double alone being responsible for £2,255 10s.

Doubles for Trainer and Jockey.

Fred Templeman, the Lambourn trainer, registered a "double" at Goodwood Races yesterday with Cotoneaster in the Craven Stakes and Galvani in the Drayton Handicap. B. Carslake, the jockey, also had two winners, Rosemary's Pet in the Singleton Handicap and Galvani in the Drayton Handicap.

HOLDER LEADS THE FIELD.

EXCITING FINISH LIKELY IN IRISH OPEN AT MALONE.

By Our Golf Correspondent.

BELFAST, Thursday.

Of the six previous winners of the Irish Open Championship, Padgham, Duncan, Kenyon and Charles Whitcombe are again in the running for the title. The strange thing about the position at the end of the day's play at Malone this evening was that the quartette were bunched together at the top of the aggregates. Thus there is the certainty of a thrilling struggle for the premier award over the 36 holes, which will conclude the tournament to-morrow. Padgham has been playing remarkably steady golf, and it is interesting to recall last year at Cork he left off at the close of the second day in exactly the same position—two rounds of 71. his third also being 71 and his final 70. But there is more than a possibility that Duncan will effect another of those brilliant recoveries that have marked his golfing career.

DUNCAN'S CONFIDENCE.

Before he went out this morning he told me that he felt as if he were going to make the pace hot and that he would be thereabouts at the finish, and his 72 is suggestive that he means business. Anything may occur on the final 36 holes.

We had another demonstration of the uncertainties of the game this evening when Lacey, who, with Kenyon, set the record for this course on the first afternoon with 70, flopped and could do no better than 82, to finish ten strokes behind the leader. That is why I think Duncan may bring it off and thus upset calculations on the last day, as he did at Portmarnock in 1927. The conditions were reminiscent of those which prevailed at Portmarnock on that occasion. It did not blow as then, but the rain came down in a heavy downpour for the greater part of the afternoon. The greens, beautiful to putt on up to the break in the weather, became like a soaked sponge, and it was in the circumstances to be expected that the scoring would not be low.

THE BEST IRISHMEN.

Ireland has done well so far as following on the heels of the leading quartette come, Syd Fairweather and Joe McCartney but four strokes to the bad. with Willie Nolan 147, while the leading amateur is Sean Burke, who beat Sheals and McMullan by one stroke.

The record for the course made yesterday by Lacey and Kenyon did not stand for long, as Herbert Jolly broke it with a 69, playing perfect golf. He holed the first nine in 32, but it should be remarked that the conditions were more favourable when he was out than they became later. His figures were:—

Out—3 4 3, 4 4 5, 3 4 3—32.
In—4 4 4, 3 4 5, 4 4 5—37.

He, however, had 79 for his first round.

James Adams, the Irish professional champion, could not do better than 81 on the opening afternoon, but to-day he went round in a capital 72, after being five better than fours for the first seven holes. Following was Padgham, the holder, with a 71 to take the lead, which had been changing all the day, and with the rain coming down in torrents it did not look as if he would be deprived of it. He turned in 33, and the only really bad hole he had on the way was the fifteenth, where he took three to get home and three putts. He was unluckily trapped at the sixteenth, which meant a five, and a five also came his way at the last green. His was the most consistent golf of the two rounds.

NOLAN RECOVERS WELL.

William Nolan was out in the worst of the weather, with George Duncan following him, and for a time the Portmarnock man was going shakily, as he opened with a five, another five, and a four at the short third Three putts at the first and erratic approaching at the other holes making the difference. Nevertheless, he was but two over fours for the first nine. He pulled himself well together when he turned for home, and, despite a lapse at the thirteenth, where he misjudged the pace of the green and was too strong with his first putt, he came back in 35—an excellent performance.

Better still was the achievement of George Duncan, who treated the gallery to a characteristically Duncanesque round of 72. Trapped at the first he had five there, but he almost holed his tee shot at the short third, and reached the fourth in a drive and a brassie to obtain his four. At the ninth he laid his mashie two yards from the hole side, and turned in 35. Then came a string of fours to the sixteenth, but he required three putts at the seventeenth. As a matter of fact he did not play the short holes well, and was on only one of them from the tee. In that way he went into the lead temporarily, and had considerably enhanced his prospects of winning the championship for the second time.

HOME PLAYER IN FORM.

Of the earlier finishers, the best was Syd Fairweather, the professional of the Malone Club, who was four strokes better than yesterday, his second round being 71. He had a long sequence of fours, six in all, to begin with, and reached the turn in one over, but it was on the inward half that he played his best golf for 34, which was made up of four threes, three fours, and two fives. Had the luck of the game gone a little in his favour he must have been even better but he just missed holing comparatively short putts at the ninth and fifteenth.

One of the really unfortunate ones, however, was Roger Greene, who would have had a 72 had the ball remained in the hole and not come back when it seemed to be down for good. His score was 76, but he had left himself far too much to do on the first day with an 80.

A DISASTROUS HOLE.

Perhaps the most remarkable of the rounds, although it was not the best, was Clifford McMullan's. He had Herbert Jolly as his partner, and experienced such a set-back early on that one would have thought it would have finished him. It came about at the fourth. He did not play a bad drive, but he was near the trees. He took an iron, and the ball just hit the trunk and went out of bounds. For his next he played the same club and the same type of shot with similar results; then he found a bunker, and all in he took ten for the hole, losing six strokes. But the game little Ulsterman went along just as if nothing untoward had occurred, was 41 for the first nine, and came home in level fours—a grand recovery in every sense of the word.

E. W. Kenyon, who won the championship at Dollymount, had 75 for a total of 145, going out in 36. His card showed twelve fours, but the only short hole that he got in the regulation figures was the seventh, and there he was fortunate to have a two.

Tom Collinge came into prominence with a 70, and with his 77 of Wednesday he was well up. He was 35 for each half.

The best 60—and those all told, 62—tieing for sixtieth place will go into the final stage to-day, so that those who scored one 56 will play off over 36 holes.

B.M.A. COMPETITION AT PORTMARNOCK.

The male delegates to the annual Conference of the British Medical Association are evidently firm believers in golf as a means of relaxation and entertainment, as over seventy gathered at Portmarnock Golf Club yesterday to compete for the annual prizes.

The Childe Cup and the Leinster Cup were the principal trophies, and were won by Dr. C. O'Donovan and Dr. P. Kelly, respectively. As both hail from England, they made atonement for the poor showing of the lady doctors from across Channel on Wednesday.

Dr. C. O'Donovan, who won the Childe Cup for Class 1, is a native of Cork residing in Leicester, while Dr. P. Kelly, who annexed the Leinster Cup for Class 2, is a Limerick man domiciled in Warrington. Dr. Kelly's was the better performance, as Dr. O'Donovan went round in the morning, when the weather was good. Details:—

Dr. C. O'Donovan and Dr. P. Kelly, 2 down, tied; Dr. R. W. Fairbrother, 3 down; Dr. J. F. Eustace, Dr. W. Peock and Dr. N. Lawler, 4 down, tied; Dr. J. J. Manning, Dr. N. Williams, Dr. A. J. Horne, Dr. R. J. White, and Dr. J. R. Prytherch, 5 down, tied; Dr. B. J. S. Belas and Dr. A. Robertson, 6 down, tied; Dr. E. K. Le Fleming and Dr. P. C. Anderson, 7 down, tied.

BOXING.

IRISH TEAM IN AMERICA.

What is described as the largest crowd that ever assembled in Chicago to greet a visiting team welcomed the Irish Boxing Team on their arrival in that city. The Irish team was given a Civic reception. For several weeks American papers have been featuring the formidable reputation of the Irish side. The Irish victories over Italy and Germany have particularly impressed the American public, as the teams of these two countries created quite a sensation on their American tours.

A special Irish day has been arranged at the World's Fair in connection with the visit of the team, and everything points to the Irish-American Tournament being one of the biggest features of the Exhibition

The Irish team consists of J. Mulligan, R. Hearns, P. Hennelly (Garda), J. Kennedy, E. Smith (St. Andrew's), P. Hughes (Corinthian), F. Kerr (Arbour Hill), P. Connolly (Army), Sergeant O'Dwyer (trainer), with Captain O'Brien as official in charge.

The team and officials is drawn from Connaught, Munster, Leinster, and Ulster, and has much experience in international boxing.

Paris Goes to the Seaside . . .

. . . And Enjoys Iced Drinks, Shrimps, and Fashions.

From Our Own Correspondent.

DEAUVILLE, Thursday.

In France the thing to do at the smart seaside resorts just now is to take an iced drink and eat shrimps on the plage before luncheon. There you can meet everyone and at the same time see lovely women in the latest fashions. You sit under brightly-coloured umbrellas, and are served by waiters in white uniforms, with gold braid, suggestive of somebody's navy.

Generally a fashion parade is staged by the Paris couturiers. Many women wear straw hats, and some of these must measure quite four feet across. They usually have a big tassel on top.

Bathing dresses are often composed of five or more colours in wide stripes, and over them at cocktail time women wear white piqué pyjama trousers of exaggerated width round the lower edges and terribly tight-fitting waistcoats in the same material as the trousers. However, the beach-apron is replacing the pyjama in many instances.

Cool Linen.

Materials—be they silk, cotton, velvet, or whatever else—are getting a bit smoother. Crinkly crêpes and cloquées have been reduced to thinner surfaces.

A charming material for hot weather is a semi-transparent, natural-coloured linen that has lumpy flecks of white in its weaves.

Camouflaged cottons and linens drive all rival fabrics into the corners of French day-time styles this season. Suits in these materials step out in the spot-light of the public eye. Cotton goods masquerading as tweed, homespun, twill and other such stuffs; linens, in the guise of shantung, serge, and what-not, and sheer fabrics made of linen plaids, develop into the smartest tailored suits imaginable.

Linings of jackets and blouses of suits are being made in the new cotton taffeta with a dark ground. Satin-surfaced cottons are being used with much success for details.

New Evening Fabrics.

For evening there is a regiment of transparent cottons and linens of which you may take your choice.

Cotton evening frocks, which are coming into fashion, are not the ordinary cotton dresses seen before. The new cottons seen for evening are as superb as gold brocade in their own way, and they are not cheap by any means. Cotton that is cross-barred or dotted or striped with velvet is the last word in summer evening materials.

Satin, velvet and fine lace are the smartest materials and the richest for evening wear. It is grand chic to wear a satin evening frock that is trimmed down to a narrow silhouette and that has a bathing-suit back. Such a dress is only successful when made by an expert cutter; but when it is well done it wears well, and always looks like "big money."

The same rule is followed in the velvet dress.

Frocks of lace are constructed on more ample lines, and it takes plenty of lace to make them as they are worn here. Another favourite material for evening seems to be crepe peau d'ange. Then there are the fragile weaves—chiffon, printed or plain, poulte-de-soie, souffle-de-soie (the thinnest sort of chiffon), tulle-illusion and tullegrecque.

Evening Wraps.

Little evening wraps are an absolute necessity for summer evenings, and every smart woman has one or more. They are an economy in that they regulate the formality of your dress, and permit you to wear it more often.

If you are getting a new evening dress you can have a short, very short, jacket to go with it, and this jacket will have at least elbow-length sleeves and be made of the same material as your dress. However, if you are adding a wrap to your present dress you may choose velvet or velveteen, and make it into a capelet or a jacket.

Seen at the latest openings are voluminous evening scarves, and these are the newest "little-wrap" fashions in Paris. They are as long as an old-fashioned feather boa, and they are made of satin, tullé or organdie in most cases.

The New Silhouette.

What can we call the new silhouette? Undulating, rippling, fluid—or merely "clothes having somehow lost the tight-fitting look which follows the lines of the figure too closely?"

Fattening? Why, never! They are merely subtle variations of flaring fullness, placed low down, somewhere where it doesn't matter, which leaves the upper part slim and youthful. Virtually all evening dresses, and especially those meant for dancing, mould the hips and flare towards the hemline. A great many are shown with harmonising capes and fichus, both quite short, reaching to the waistline, or quite long and pointed, for evening wear.

Full-skirted effects are not neglected, but even then are merely a fullness produced by groups of narrow, cone-shaped, almost tassel-like, floats of net or chiffon, which, added in quantities on slender skirts, give a combination of fullness, with full-looking effects. The evening silhouette remains extraordinarily straight. An occasional godet or inset panel may be introduced, but the decorative value of each individual model must be sought for in purity of line and in impeccable cut.

Everywoman's Garden.

PREPARING THE AUTUMN FLORAL DISPLAY.

Start feeding autumn flowering plants, such as border chrysanthemums, Michaelmas daisies, etc. Thin out any weakly growths and stake the plants. Spray violets vigorously to keep down pests, and remove dead leaves and runners.

Box edgings are now needing their final trim of the season. Cut away some of the greenery and side shoots of sweet peas to encourage them to continue flowering.

Start potting up strawberries intended for forcing, and complete the preparation of the site for new strawberry beds.

Remove any diseased fruits and unhealthy-looking growths from all fruit trees.

Feed tomatoes, and give liquid manure to leeks, celery, marrows and ridge cucumbers.

Bend over the haulm of spring-sown onions to encourage bulbing.

MARY'S LETTER.

SWEET BLOOMING LAVENDER.

MULTITUDE OF WAYS TO USE IT.

Dear Aileen,—Last time I wrote to you I was in the throes of borrowing from the summer garden to help to stock the winter larder. At the moment I am equally busy in that self-same garden, but my task is less strenuous.

My work now is the popular job of cutting lavender spikes and getting the full-blown flowers ready for the protection of linen presses and wardrobes.

As you know, in addition to its fresh perfume, lavender is an excellent moth-chaser.

There's a very old song which goes:—

Ladies fair, I bring you
Lavender with spikes of blue.

And the chorus, becoming commercial, says:

"Who'll buy my lavender, sweet, blooming lavender?"

If the flower girls of Dublin are not songstresses, they have at least most excellent baskets of lavender for sale at the moment—it seems to be a particularly good crop this year—so let's all benefit by it.

Essence of Cleanliness.

Lavender perfume is so utterly clean that it is easy to imagine the name being derived from lavare—to wash—or some people will say that it is taken from the Spanish lavandera—a laundress. In either case it speaks of cleanliness. The plant yields an essential oil, which is used both in medicine and in perfumery, and an excellent toilet accessory is made by mixing spirits of wine, oil of lavender and ambergris. This mixture is inappropriately called "lavender water."

All of us have some household treasures of linen or lace carefully locked away for use only on special occasions. All such valuables should be put away with lavender. For one thing, as I said before, it keeps moths away; but, still more important, it keeps off that "fusty" smell that often attaches itself to things unused.

A Sleep Inducer.

Little bags of lavender stitched on to the corner of pillows will be found in their fragrance to induce sleep, and in the making of cushions the same idea can be usefully employed.

For hanging in wardrobes the best method is to take a square of net, put a small heap of lavender in the centre, and tie firmly with a piece of ribbon. The net allows the perfume through more quickly than muslin. This bag can be hung at the top of the wardrobe, where it will not be moved about.

For lavender sachets which are liable to constant handling it is better to use muslin or very fine silk.

Welcome Gifts.

All kinds of delightful little lavender cases and sachets can be made now for use as small gifts later on. They will also be welcomed by stallholders at bazaars or sales of work, where such dainties usually sell like hot cakes.

I have just finished a beautiful, though quite inexpensive, handkerchief sachet, which is to form the outer covering of a birthday present for a very special friend. As her birthday is early in August, I took lavender as a leading note, but contrary to my usual custom (for I invariably stitch up my sachets in mauve and white) this time I made the sachet of very pale pink satin. I embroidered a spray of lavender over the upper fold and lined it with pink.

I then made a little pillow-like interlining which I filled lightly with down and lavender, and this I laid inside the sachet, which folds in two and ties apparently with a mauve ribbon bow—in reality the bow "stays put," and the fastening is made with a neat press fastener.

The case holds a dozen small handkerchiefs, and I hope my friend will like her present as much as I do.

Sprigged Organdie.

There is always a particular thrill when presenting something that you would just love to keep for yourself, isn't there? Although not in connection with lavender, I have seen a few days ago a beautiful set of sachets, for handkerchiefs, nighties and oddments made with an outer covering of sprigged organdie. This material is ideal for any dainty use, and washes up like new in cold water. It had such a popular run this year that there will be lots of very short lengths to be had cheap in the autumn.

Grey organdie, lined with a colour, makes an extremely chic sachet, and has the advantage of not "showing its age," so to speak. The colour of the lining must, of course, be repeated in some way to avoid dulness.

It is now, when the long bright evenings are still here, that little gifts for use in December might be economically constructed. Each year, when the mad Christmas rush comes, I say: "Oh, why didn't I make little special gifts months ago?" It would ensure far nicer gifts for our friends and infinitely less expense for ourselves if only we had the necessary energy to get busy right away.

Yours,
Mary.

FAMOUS DOG INJURED.

The famous greyhound, Beef Cutlet, holder of the world's record over 600 yards and runner-up in this year's greyhound Derby and Cesarewitch, met with a serious injury last night while contesting a race at the Hall Green track at Birmingham, and may not be able to run again.

SALES AT SHELBOURNE PARK.

A catalogue of 180 lots was presented by Messrs. R. J. Goff for their monthly sale of greyhounds, held yesterday at Shelbourne Park. The sales, preceded by trials, attracted a large gathering, and many likely cross-Channel buyers were present. Though bidding ruled brisk, prices were not very high, but a large number of the dogs sent up changed hands. Details:— Gns.

Be sure their food is safe this summer

SUPPLIED FOR 10/- DOWN & EASY TERMS.

You cannot be too careful about food freshness. Kiddies, especially are susceptible to food that has tainted. Unfortunately you cannot always tell, either by appearance or smell, when some foods have started to 'turn' and are definitely unfit to consume.
You can, however, ensure the purity of milk, meat, fish, butter, etc., by keeping them in an Electrolux Refrigerator. Apart from keeping food beautifully fresh for days and preventing waste, think of the joys of refrigeration—a glass of ice-cold lemonade or coffee whenever you want it, ice-cubes always at hand and delicious cold desserts and ice-cream that you could prepare.
By our Easy Terms plan an Electrolux 'Minor' Refrigerator will be delivered at once on payment of 10s. Cash price £19/10/-.
For larger families there is the Electrolux L.2. Price £28/10/-, or £1 down and Easy Terms.
Both models are air-cooled and operate automatically, and in silence, without motor or moving parts, by gas, electricity or paraffin.
Note:—Delivery charge for the 'Minor' is 10/-, and for the L.2 £1. If hire purchase, either amount can be paid as an instalment.

COUNTY DUBLIN TITLES.

GREGORY DEFEATED IN DOUBLES MATCH.

A certain amount of rain at Carrickmines yesterday curtailed play, but considerable progress was made, and most of the championship events are out to the semi-final round. In the men's singles T. G. McVeagh, J. C. Gregory, and A. E. Fannin passed on to the penultimate stage, at which R. J. Sandys had already arrived on the previous day. None of the matches yesterday produced much in the way of a struggle, but the semi-finals, in which McVeagh meets Sandys, and Gregory opposes Fannin should be interesting.

Miss P. Wallis went into the semi-final of the women's singles, beating Miss V. Mahony after dropping the first set. Miss Wallis, once she found her length, drove with great severity, and became more dominant as the match progressed. Mrs. H. M. Hall had a very easy passage into the semi-final at the expense of Mrs. D. Collins, and the others who have got so far are Miss N. Stoker and Miss S. Moore.

It may be mentioned, in connection with this event, that Miss N. Moore took the first set off Miss N. Stoker in the third round on Wednesday, and the score should read, 5-7, 6-1, 6-1, and not as previously published. This was a fine performance on Miss Moore's part.

The best match of the day was the third round, one in which A. E. Fannin and V. Allman Smith beat J. C. Gregory and R. F. Scovell. The Anglo-Irish combination won the first set fairly easily, but their opponents were fighting all the time, and about the middle of the second set they struck their best form. This was desperately hard fought, and Gregory and his partner had a couple of match points at 5-4. The game was saved by the opposition, whose smashing and volleying were magnificent. C. Gregory was also playing well, but from 6-5 on the Irish pair generally held the lead on the odd game, and at 11-9 they ran out for set. After that they were definitely on top, and they ran through the third set, only dropping two games.

The four couples who have reached the semi-final of the women's doubles did not have much difficulty in going through the second round, though the Misses S. Murphy and S. Moore played well to win after dropping the first set to Mrs. Tottenham and Mrs. G. Martin. A couple of strong pairs went into the semi-final of the mixed doubles, these being T. G. McVeagh and Miss H. Wallis and J. C. Gregory and Miss V. Mahony. Details:—

MEN'S SINGLES—THIRD ROUND.

T. G. McVeagh beat R. F. Scovell—6-4, 6-3.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES—FIRST ROUND.

Mrs. J. F. Miley and Miss H. Wallis beat Mrs. F. C. Martin and Mrs. D. Figgis—6-0, 6-3.

SECOND ROUND.

Mrs. Miley and Miss H. Wallis beat Mrs. S. Scroope and Mrs. B. T. O'Reilly—6-2, 6-1.
Misses P. Wallis and N. Stoker beat Misses L. Mahony and P. Dempsey—6-0, 6-0.
Misses G. Murphy and S. Moore beat Mrs. Tottenham and Mrs. G. Martin—4-6, 6-3, 6-2.
Misses P. McCann and V. Mahony beat Misses B. Craig and E. Meares—6-2, 7-5.

MIXED DOUBLES—SECOND ROUND.

C. and Mrs. Blair White beat B. T. Cherry and Miss B. Brooks—3-6, 6-2, 6-4.
V. Allman Smith and Miss N. Stoker beat H. F. Cronin and Miss S. Moore—6-2, 6-2.
A. Bradford and Mrs. V. H. Parr w.o., P. A. Ryan and Mrs. J. H. Wilson scr.

THIRD ROUND.

T. G. McVeagh and Miss H. Wallis beat A. L. Moore and Mrs. H. Hall—6-2, 6-2.

THE TOTE BOARD.

INTERIM REPORT.

In presenting their half-yearly report of the working of the tote, the Board of Control for Mechanical Betting in Saorstat Eireann do not wish to make any comment save to remind the public, if indeed reminder is needed, that the results have been achieved in a year marked by acute financial stringency and economic depression.

From January 1st to June 30th, 1933, the tote was operated at forty-three meetings, comprising fifty-four days' racing, as compared with forty-two meetings and fifty-four days' racing in 1932.

The turnover for this period in 1933 amounted to £60,959, as compared with £55,391 in 1932.

The net profit for the half-year, after deducting all the cost of working the tote, including therein bank interest and overhead charges for the period, was £1,242. In 1932 it was £797.

The Board have paid to racecourses during the period the sum of £1,523, being 2½ per cent. of the gross turnover. In 1932 the figure was £1,383.

Four races have been directly endowed by the Board during the period out of the profits earned last year. No races were endowed in 1932.

SHIPPING REGULATIONS.

TEXT OF THE NEW FREE STATE BILL.

By Our Political Correspondent.

The new bill concerning merchant shipping, which was introduced in the Dail on Wednesday by Mr. Sean Lemass, Minister for Industry and Commerce, has now been circulated. Its full title is "An Act to give effect to draft conventions adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations relating respectively to unemployment indemnity in case of loss or foundering of the ship, the minimum age for the admission of young persons to employment as trimmers or stokers, and the compulsory medical examination of children and young persons employed at sea, and to amend the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894 to 1932, in so far as is necessary to give effect to the said conventions."

The bill provides that where a seaman's employment is terminated by the wreck or loss of a ship he will be entitled to receive wages for two months at the rate which he was previously receiving.

The owner shall not, however, be liable to pay if the seaman was able to obtain suitable employment in the meantime.

A "seaman" is defined as any person employed on board any ship in any capacity, but in the case of a fishing boat does not include any person entitled to be remunerated only by a share of the profits or gross earnings of the boat. These provisions are to be retrospective to 5th July, 1930.

With certain exceptions, no young person shall be employed at work as a stoker or trimmer. The exceptions include employment on a training ship or a ship propelled otherwise than by steam.

Young persons shall not be employed on any ship without a medical certificate of fitness. This does not apply to ships in which only members of the same family are employed or on the ground of urgency.

Specified penalties are provided for breaches of the various regulations.

The expression "ship" means any sea-going ship or boat of any description which is registered in Saorstat Eireann, and includes any fishing boat entered in the fishing boat register in Saorstat Eireann, but does not include any tug, dredger, sludge vessel, barge, or other craft whose ordinary course of navigation does not extend beyond the seaward limits of the jurisdiction of the harbour authority of the port at which such vessel is regularly employed, if and so long as such vessel is engaged in her ordinary occupation.

GARDEN, FARM, BEES, ETC.

ROSE SLIPS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—

The advantage of propagating Roses by slips, for which the Teas and Hybrid Teas are so suitable, is that you get no troublesome suckers of the doggy tribe afterwards, as with the briar budded bushes. Preparation should now be made by setting a garden frame facing the north, and introducing a little well-decayed manure for the plants to find for themselves when starting to root, and on this nine inches of good, sound loam surfaced with sand, into which the slips are firmly inserted from four to six inches deep. The best slips are the semi-ripened shoots of this year's growth pulled, not cut, with a heel to be pared smooth, the weak, soft top being removed, leaving three or four eyes, or at least two, when inserted, above the soil. As a rule, slips thus treated before August is out root before winter, but with some, possibly, not till spring.
